VILLAGE OFFICIALS in favor of building a parking garage in the central business district are hopeful that a developer will decide to build a shopping plaza-office building next to the garage. One developer is investigating the feasibility of constructing such a building, Village Planner Joseph Kesler says. The village board will review the idea tonight.

Garage before village tonight; Ryan asks ruling

by BILL HILL

The Arlington Heights Village Board will meet tonight to discuss whether a 500-car parking garage should be built in the central business district.

The special meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan said he hopes the board will vote tonight on the question of building the garage on the northeast corner of the intersection of Vail and Sigwalt streets.

"It's time for the elected officials to make a decision, if not Monday, then soon thereafter," Ryan said.

"I, PERSONALLY, have in my mind most of the ingredients to make a decision," he said.

The village board postponed making a decision when a special downtown improvements committee recommended in July that a special service tax district be created to pay for the parking garage.

On July 12, the board directed the village administration to prepare a report on possible methods of financing for the garage, which is estimated to cost $1.5 million.

The report from Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson, released last week, recommends that revenue bonds be issued to pay for the garage. It also recommends that a privately developed shopping plaza-office building be built adjacent to the parking garage.

"I think the methods suggested are a very viable way of financing it. It is certainly an economical and business-like approach," Ryan said.

Ryan called the commercial development "a dynamic idea."

"WE HAVE TO be realistic. We're going to have to create some of the demand for the parking garage. It would be naive to assume people will walk five to six blocks from the garage to stores," he said.

Ryan a long-time supporter of downtown redevelopment, predicted "a big turnaround" if the shopping center is built in conjunction with a parking garage.

"If this doesn't pass, it will just be one more in a long line of downtown studies," Ryan said.

"We have spent a great number of years talking about improving the downtown area, but this is the first time we've carried a proposal right to the end. If this parking garage doesn't come about, I really feel the downtown area will deteriorate," he said.

The parking garage will not revitalize the central business district by itself, but it should create a climate for new development in the downtown area, Ryan said.

REVENUE BONDS were picked as the best financing mechanism because the central business district is too small to support a special tax district, Hanson said.

A coalition including more than half the downtown property owners, had been formed to oppose the creation of a special tax district.

Hanson's financing plan for the $1.5 million parking garage is to issue $1.24 million worth of revenue bonds and to sell the adjacent land for the commercial center for about $260,000. The annual debt service for the revenue bonds, if based on a 20-year plan at 7 per cent interest, will be about $117,000. Annual maintenance costs for the garage have been estimated at $30,000.

Village officials hope that a local bank will buy the bonds at a lower interest rate.

New facility holds key to success: Kesler

There's a little bit of Linus in all of us.

Maybe that's why Village Planner Joseph Kesler speaks of security blankets when he explains why a downtown parking garage needs a shopping plaza-office building next to it.

"It's the key to success downtown. A parking garage here by itself could involve some risks, but with this building we are almost assured of full success," Kesler said.

Kesler says the benefits of a privately-financed shopping center-office complex adjacent to a parking garage are three-fold: it will increase the assessed valuation of the downtown shopping area; it will attract shoppers to the area; and it will provide the village with an additional $60,000 per year in sales and property tax revenue.

"WE REALLY NEED it as a security blanket," he said.

The entire proposal is a Kesler brainstorm, created during the past two months after the village board balked at the recommendation from the special downtown improvements committee to create a special tax district to pay for the parking garage.

The shopping center idea has been received favorably by several developers, Kesler said.

"At least one is very serious about it and is studying its feasibility and financing possibilities," he said.

Kesler's preliminary proposal for the commercial center calls for a two-level shopping center, completely enclosed, with five additional levels for offices and a restaurant. It is proposed that the four levels of the building be directly connected to the corresponding garage floors, permitting patrons to drive and park at the proper level and be protected from the weather.

THE SHOPPING mall is conceived as a specialty center with 44 small boutiques.

The shopping area is greatly needed, Kesler said.

The villageplanning department estimates that the entire commercial area of Arlington Heights has a deficiency of approximately 400,000 square feet of retail space, he said.

Kesler predicted that the owners of the commercial development would need to lease half of the parking spaces in the parking garage.

No compliance with court order

Square's hazards remain: village

A court-ordered cleanup at the uncompleted Arlington Square apartment development in Arlington Heights has not been made, village officials say.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard A. Jorzak issued the cleanup-order Aug. 13 after Martin Munsen, Arlington Heights director of building and zoning, testified the project at Rand Road and Ill. Rte. 53 is hazardous and unsanitary with open stairwells and elevator shafts, collapsed walls and some basements with as much as eight feet of standing water in them.

"We don't have compliance with the judge's order. They have not done a thing," Munsen said Friday.

Conditions to be corrected included the sealing of buildings, bracing of walls to prevent further collapse and installation of electrical and telephone lines to the unit used by watchmen.

WEEDS, standing water, and general construction debris littering the grounds must be cleaned up also, Munsen reported.

Jorzak placed a 10-day deadline on the clean-up order directed at the developers, Plato Foufas & Co.

Munsen met with village attorney Jack M. Siegel Friday to discuss conditions at the 27.5-acre project and what the village's next legal step should be.

The village board has declared the project a public nuisance and has instituted condemnation proceedings. The village's legal action is aimed at having the development razed or completed.

WORK ON THE project, planned as a $13 million condominium development, began in 1974 but was halted about a year ago when Foufas reportedly ran into financial problems.

The village board started the condemnation action in December to force some action on the partially completed buildings.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan said, as the village entered into the latest round of court action, that the project must be completed or demolished. He said it could not be tolerated in its present condition.

Officials seek 2nd try at funds for Salt Creek

Northwest suburban legislators are hoping they'll soon have another chance to unfreeze money for a small but crucial part of the flood-control work on Salt Creek.

The Illinois House of Representatives failed by six votes in July to pass a bill that included $350,000 for right-of-way needed to widen a short stretch of Salt Creek immediately upstream from the new $7.5-million Busse Woods reservoir.

The channel widening work and five smaller retention basins planned for the Upper Salt Creek watershed are designed to control flooding in the upstream communities of Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Inverness, an Illinois Dept. of Transportation engineer said.

IF GOV. DANIEL Walker calls the legislature into special session on his plans to increase state aid to education by speeding collection of sales and income taxes, Rep. Eugenia S. Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, says she'll try to put the Salt Creek project on the agenda.

"If it looks like there's going to be a call," she said, "I'll be on the phone to the governor" asking that the stalled funding bill be revived,

Rep. Virginia B. Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, said the veto session scheduled for Nov. 18 could be used for another vote on the Salt Creek funds.

"It's inconceivable that the legislature wouldn't fund this," she said. "After all the years we've been negotiating for federal funds, it's incredible that the State of Illinois is causing the problem."

THE SALT CREEK work was only a small part of the $96-million bonding bill that passed the state Senate by a unanimous vote but failed in the House by a 101-17 count because 107 "aye" votes were needed for approval.

Sec. of State and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Michael J. Howlett has charged that the House failure to fund the channel work makes the $26 million flood-control project useless.

During a tour of the Busse Woods reservoir last week, Howlett said the delay in the channel widening creates the threat of spring floods in Elk Grove Village, Wood Dale, Oak Oak Brook, Villa Park and Elmhurst.

"I don't want to be in the position of disagreeing with my candidate, but a lot of good has been done by the work that's already been done," Mrs. Chapman said. "But the project has been delayed and homes and property are still in jeopardy."

Bell rings up new victories in cutting directory errors

by JUDIE BLACK

Today

Even Alexander Graham Bell probably would have blown his stack or at least hung up or maybe thrown the telephone directory away in disgust.

If Bell had wanted to buy a Hoffman Estates village car sticker or register to vote, he probably would have wanted to call the Hoffman Estates Village Hall. But what number would he call when no number for the village hall is listed?

Oh sure, there's a number for the fire department, the police department, even the water and street department. But no village hall.

WELL, HE could always try the village president, listed right there between police and water . . . .

That's exactly what scores of Hoffman Estates residents did last month when the 1976 telephone books from Illinois Bell were delivered, minus a telephone number for the village offices.

"To me it was very funny," said Village Pres. Virginia Hayter. "Of course, I was out of the office that day, and it was my secretary who went crazy."

The number left out was 882-9100, the general number for all departments at village hall. Mrs. Hayter's number of 885-8490 remained.

If you call that number now, an operator (an interceptor) will ask you whom or what department you really want: the president? the clerk? the mayor?

Mrs. Hayter's office number has been changed to 885-1180.

Although the omission was an inconvenience to Hoffman Estates residents and village employes, it was a mistake easy to understand. The village hall number was only one of 3.5 million listings handled last year by Illinois Bell.

It was an omission among 172,000 listings in the Northwest Suburban regional directory alone, one of eight regional directories distributed by the company.

It was one mistake in a decreasing error rate. In 1974, Illinois Bell reported 31 mistakes for every 100,000 listings. Last year, the error rate had dropped to 19 errors per 100,000.

"WE'VE DEFINITELY been improving," Jean Lowum, editor of the Illinois Bell directory, said. "But we want to get it next to nothing."

Toward that end, the directory department has spent about $2.3 million during the past two years in converting from its predominantly manual process to a full automated and computerized system. DirEct (for directory project) should be operating by the end of 1977.

The system should be a distinct help to the department's 103 employes each handling 117 directory changes a day, which include additional, altered or new listings.

That's more than 12,000 listings a

U.S. funds urged for lake water

Federal financing to assist Northwest suburban communities in developing an independent Lake Michigan water supply system has been proposed by Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter.

Speaking at a meeting of about 30 Northwest suburban officials with U.S. Rep. Phillip M. Crane, R-12th, in Buffalo Grove Saturday, Mrs. Hayter called for federal government establishment of a "long-term revolving loan fund for suburban water needs, similar to loans to the Chicago Metropolitan Sanitary District."

Mrs. Hayter said the suburbs would have difficulty in financing privately a system estimated to cost between $29 million and $100 million.

SOME OF US have high tax rates now and we know business and industry are looking at other states. Let's not do anything to drive them further away and really upset the tax base," she said.

Crane urged the officials to "fully explore" Mrs. Hayter's proposal, saying, "I think the idea certainly has a lot of merit."

Many communities have sought an allocation of Lake Michigan water to boost dwindling local supplies working chiefly through two groups DAMP and SHARE +3.

DAMP includes Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine. SHARE +3 includes Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine and Buffalo Grove.

ALLOCATIONS ARE expected to be announced before Dec. 31 by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation's division of water resources.

A 1959 U.S. Supreme Court decision limits the amount of water that the department can allocate from Lake Michigan to the suburbs to 3,200 cubic feet per second.

Elk Grove Village Mgr. Charles A. Willis said the eight communities in SHARE +3 have asked for a total of 8,900 cubic feet per second. Willis is coordinator of SHARE +3.

Lake Forest resident John Henry Kleine, a staff member of the recently formed Illinois Water Supply Task Force, suggested Congress be asked to approve legislation increasing the suburban allocation to 10,000 cubic feet per second and said "navigational flows" should be transferred to the jurisdiction of the federal government.

Mount Prospect Pres. Robert Teichert said Lake Michigan should be considered a "shared national asset" that is controlled totally by Congress. But Teichert cautioned the municipal officials against optimism over getting lake water, noting DAMP was formed 19 years ago.

"The problem hasn't been solved. It's still very much here. Now there are only more people to serve," Teichert said.

Dist. 57 pact details to be told tonight

Details of a tentative agreement between Mount Prospect Dist. 57 teachers and the board of education are expected to be released tonight. Peter Olesen, a board negotiator, said he cannot comment on the negotiations until 8 p.m. today because of an agreement between the board and teachers. Negotiations began in March, Olesen said, and three bargaining sessions were held last week. Spokesmen for Dist. 57 teachers' negotiators could not be reached for comment.

Parking garage to be discussed

Arlington Heights trustees tonight will discuss whether a 500-car parking garage should be built in the village's downtown area. Village Pres. James T. Ryan says he hopes the village board will decide the issue. "It's time for the elected officials to make a decision," Ryan said. In a report released last week, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson recommended the proposed garage be financed through revenue bonds and that a privately developed shopping plaza-office building be built adjacent to the garage. "If this parking garage doesn't come about, I really feel the downtown area will deteriorate," Ryan said.

Dems' economic platform blasted

by STEVE BROWN

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, Sunday charged the Democrats have produced a platform of economic policies "vastly worse" for the nation than anything ever proposed by the liberal U.S. Sen. George McGovern.

Crane delivered a 40-minute lecture attacking the opposition, contending the Democratic platform is so costly that even the "reckless spending Democrats" cannot deliver. Crane's speech closed the 12th Congressional District Republican Conference before about 350 persons at the Arlington Park Hilton, Arlington Heights.

The congressman's remarks stuck close to a theme developed earlier in the program by three other Republican congressmen who blamed the Democrats for blocking reform legislation and proposing programs the government cannot afford.

CRANE RIPPED the Democratic platform and programs and said that more than 60 per cent of the public favors programs espoused by the GOP.

He cited a balanced federal budget and reduced government spending as issues supported by the public and advanced by the Republicans.

He admitted the GOP will be the "underdog" in the fall election campaign, but predicted that if the party wages a hard-fought campaign, "there will be massive Republican victories everywhere from the White House to the Courthouse."

The gathering also heard from Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson, who while also predicting success, reminded the crowd that "no thinking Republican should sit out the election."

THOMPSON'S REMARKS underlined the theme of the gathering which was to demonstrate party unity in the 12th District. Crane admitted he had been on the "wrong side" in the primary fight between President Ford and Ronald Reagan, but said he is now supporting the President. Crane had led the Reagan effort in Illinois.

The Congressional panel included U.S. Rep. Henry Hyde, R-6th, and U.S. Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-4th, both Ford backers, and U.S. Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., who said he was behind Reagan.

All three blasted the Democratic majority in Congress and said many legislative matters will be left unfinished when Congress adjourns Oct. 2.

"The Congress would have been better off if this Congress had never met," Bauman said. The final month of action will see the introduction of bills for solely political purposes that the Democrats hope to make an issue in the closing days of the campaign, he said.

3 million in suburbs by 2000: study

The City of Chicago and Cook County suburbs will be just 11,000 persons apart in population by the year 2000, according to newly revised figures prepared by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

The population estimates project that by 2000, Chicago will have 3,011,000 persons, down more than 300,000 from the 1970 census. Suburban Cook County will have 3,000,100 persons, up from the 1970 census population of 2,124,500.

The NIPC figures also project that the five Northwest suburban townships in Cook County will have a total population of 726,900, up from 442,100 in the 1970 census.

Lake County's population is projected in increase from 382,600 in 1970 to 700,100 in 2000. Vernon Township, which includes part of Buffalo Grove, will have a population of 41,000 in 2000, compared to 12,800 in 1970. The population of Ela Township north of Palatine is projected to increase from 12,200 in 1970 to 37,900 in 2000.

The NIPC forecast represents a revision of an earlier population forecast prepared in 1974. Compared to the 1974 figures, the new forecast shows growth in the total six-county metropolitan area to be slowing, while growth will increase in the Northwest suburbs.

In 1974, NIPC officials estimated the six-county area's population in 2000 to be 9,164,000, while the new estimate projects a population of just 8,925,400 that year. The projected year 2000 population for the five Northwest suburban townships in 1974 was 697,000, while the new projections increase that to 726,900.

The biggest change in the year 2000 projections since 1974 involves Palatine Township, where the estimated population has been increased from 105,000 to 124,300.

Max Dieber, head of economic and demographic analysis for NIPC, said the change in Palatine primarily reflects increases in the growth rate in the Palatine Township part of the Village of Hoffman Estates.

Other changes in the year 2000 projections since 1974 involve Schaumburg Township, whose projected population has been increased from 155,000 to 168,700, and Maine Township, where the projected population was cut from 160,000 to 156,700.

Dieber said the reduction in the projection for Maine Township reflects the fact that "the growth there has been lower than anticipated.

Following are the year 2000 projections for townships in the Northwest suburbs, listing both 1970 census figures, year 2000 projections from 1974 and the newest NIPC year 2000 projections.

Township	1970	2000-1974	2000-1976
Elk Grove	77,200	117,000	116,600
Maine	140,200	160,000	156,700
Palatine	55,000	105,000	124,300
Schaumburg	50,500	155,000	168,700
Wheeling	119,200	160,000	160,600
Ela	12,200	37,000	37,900
Vernon	12,800	40,000	41,000

Incumbent Lindberg offers to debate Bakalis

Illinois Comptroller George Lindberg has become the latest politician to challenge his opponent to debates.

Lindberg made his challenge, charging that Michael Bakalis, his Democratic opponent, "showed little concern for fiscal matter" while he served as Illinois Supt. of Public Instruction from 1970-74.

Bakalis called the Lindberg statement "the desperate act of a desperate man."

Although Lindberg admitted that it is unusual for an incumbent to issue a debate challenge, he denied that the effort is being made in an attempt to reverse polls that show him trailing Bakalis.

BAKALIS SAID he is sure there will be a number of joint appearances of the candidates during the campaign.

"If he wants to pay for the television time, I'll be glad to debate him," he added.

The comptroller, at a press briefing last week, issued a "white paper" comparing his record with Bakalis' when he held state office.

The report draws largely on comments from documents compiled by the Illinois Auditor General's office. The reports circulated by Lindberg generally were critical of Bakalis and praised Lindberg's record.

THE CHARGES against Bakalis include that patronage considerations strongly influenced hiring decisions and that there was inadequate record keeping.

Bakalis argued Lindberg has increased the size of his payroll and budget since taking office in 1974.

"My record shows that I reduced my budget during the four years I was in office," Bakalis said.

Ford wants park, refuge lands doubled

OLD FAITHFUL, Wyo. (UPI) — President Ford Sunday proposed a Bicentennial birthday present for future generations in the form of a $1.5 billion doubling of the nation's urban and national parks, wildlife refuges, recreation facilities and historic sites.

In a speech delivered beside Old Faithful geyser, the landmark of America's oldest national park, Ford noted the country now has 63.2 million acres of park and refuge lands set aside by those who came before.

As he was about halfway into his speech the geyser erupted 100 feet in the air, as it does every 65 to 67 minutes, and Ford along with Interior Secretary Thomas Kleepe, turned to watch it.

Returning to his speech, Ford said: "Now it is our turn to make our own gift outright to those who will come after us, 15 years, 40 years, 100 years from now."

"I want to be as faithful to my grandchildren's generation as Old Faithful has been to our's. What better way can we begin our Third Century of freedom?"

The President, in his first speech since accepting the Republican presidenial nomination, said he is asking Congress to approve a 10-year program to:

• Spend $141 million for new land for the project.

• Spend $700 million developing new and existing parks and refuges for recreation and conservation.

• Approve $459 million to improve National Park and refuge staffing.

• Spend $200 million additional in Community Development Bloc Grant funds for improving parks in urban areas of America.

Ford's visit was a return to the park where, in 1936 as a summertime Park Ranger, he fed bears, fought fires and according to old forest comrades — fended off admiring female tourists.

He said however it was more than a sentimental journey. In this bicentennial summer Americans celebrated their ancestors and "renewed our vows to their vision of freedom and equality," he said. "But I find myself asking: Can't we do more?

"Can't we do something special. . . a gift that will still be remembered gratefully 100 years from now? I believe we can."

Calling for the doubling of the park and refuge lands, Ford said, "This initial commitment may mean we will have to trim some waste and tighten our belts elsewhere but it is the soundest investment I can envision in the future of America. We must act now to prevent the loss of treasures that can never be replaced for ourselves, our children, and for future generations of Americans," he said.

The President said in 1976 alone some 260 million visitors used America's 287 national parks from the Virgin Islands and Maine to Alaska and Hawaii. "But I am sure there are times when some of you thought all 277 million were gathered in one campsight."

In other news Sunday:

• Time magazine reported in New York that Ford has cut Jimmy Carter's lead for the presidency by one third since the Democratic and Republican National conventions.

Ford now commands 40 per cent of the vote as against 38 per cent just before the Democratic convention, and Carter musters 46 per cent as against 47 per cent, according to a nationwide telephone survey by Yankelovich, Skelly & White, Inc. "Thus Ford has cut Carter's lead by a third, from 9 percentage points to 6," Time said.

• Jimmy Carter taught the men's Bible class Sunday at his Baptist church in Plains, Ga., played host to his wife's family at Sunday dinner and put the finishing touches on an economics speech he will give in Washington this week to the AFL-CIO general board.

Lethal TCDD in U.S. environment: report

A potentially lethal substance that forced the evacuation of Seveso, Italy, last month because of a chemical plant explosion is present in the American enviroment and the food chain, according to an article in Newsday Sunday. The newspaper article said the compound, known as TCDD, is the most deadly of 60 laboratory-made substances known as dioxins and can sicken and kill, and produce major birth defects and deformities. Newsday said TCDD is found in herbicides spread in national park forests and has turned up in samples of beef fat and liver taken from cattle that grazed on land treated with the chemical. The article also said scientists are checking out preliminary indications of TCDD in mother's milk.

Time running out on 94th Congress

With time starting to run out on the 94th Congress, both houses this week take up some of the thorny issues they have put off until now. The Senate has decided to escape the crush of work at day's end Wednesday, beginning a long Labor Day recess after dealing with such controversial issues as whether to save the prehistoric New River in Appalachia and a filibuster over an antitrust bill. The House will take only Friday and Labor Day off, faced with the usual end-of-the-session logjam of legislation. It aims to quit for the year on Oct. 2, while Senate leaders doubt that body will have finished its work by then. Still to come to either floor are such major pieces of legislation as the income tax revision bill, the postal reorganization bill and the public service jobs bill.

Viking 2 takes pictures of Utopia

Viking 2 started taking pictures of the frozen volcanic waste of the Martian Plains of Utopia Sunday so its Sept. 3 landing site can be plotted. The landing target was to be chosen Monday. The Utopia Plains are strewn with volcanic rocks, but geologists said deep wind-blown dust has covered the rocks and should cushion the three-legged robot's touchdown. There is believed to be five times as much moisture in the northern latitudes where Viking 2 will land as elsewhere on the planet, and scientists say there is a better chance of finding life where there is more water.

N. Korea pushes separation proposal

North Korea pushed Sunday for immediate acceptance of its proposal for separating troops at the Panjunjom truce villlage, but a Seoul newspaper said talks cannot begin until the Communists guarantee the safety of United Nations personnel. The battle of words on both sides of the 38th parallel made doubtful any immediate resolution of tension brought about by the ax-slayings of two U.S. Army officers by North Korean guards Aug. 18. Hankook Ilbo, a Seul newspaper, quoted foreign ministry sources as saying the Communist side's unwillingness to provide the safety assurances would delay negotiations by the Korean Military Armistice Commission.

Belfast terror bombs injure 29

Terrorists bombed a crowded bar in the northern outskirts of Belfast and firebombed a house in south Belfast, injuring at least 29 persons late Saturday, police reported Sunday. The violence and at least three suspicious fires came in the wake of a women's march for peace that saw thousands of Roman Catholic women cross the "peace line" into Protestant territory for the first time for seven years. The bomb planted in the Catholic-owned Glen Inn at Glengormley, on Belfast's northern outskirts, injured 26 persons, four seriously. A gasoline bomb thrown into a house injured a young man, his wife and a 15-year-old girl. All three are Catholics.

Yanks tighten security in Iran

Americans working on Iranian military contracts tightened security Sunday and police hunted the Marxist assassins of three California civilians reportedly working on a top secret project for Iran's air force. A friend said William Cottrell, one of the three Americans killed in an ambush Saturday by urban guerrillas, was a project leader for the Rockwell International, a U.S. defense contractor company that specializes in electronic equipment. Cottrell was an electronics and missiles weaponry expert, the friend said, and could have been working on IBEX, a $1 billion project to build an electronics surveillance system for Iran.

Louisville busing begins Wednesday

Hint 'possible guerrilla warfare'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — School buses roll Wednesday into the second year of court-ordered desegregation busing in Jefferson (Louisville) County schools. One antibusing leader has warned of "possible guerrilla warfare," but most officials are expecting much less trouble.

Jefferson County Police Chief Russell McDaniel, criticized by a grand jury for being unprepared for last year's antibusing violence, is optimistic his 450-man county police force, backed by a Louisville police force twice that size, will be ready.

"Our intelligence sources on antibusing activities are much better than they were one year ago," McDaniel said. "Most of their leaders want law and order just as much as we do."

Last Sept. 5, on a Friday evening following the second day of school, an antibusing demonstration in the blue-collar suburb of Valley Station erupted into violence that spread to other suburbs and injured 91 policemen.

Bill Kellerman, an antibusing leader and a candiate for the county's chief executive position of county judge, said, "The antibusing movement will not be out in the streets as much as last year, but you may see hit-and-run tactics very hard for police to control."

"For want of a better word, it could be guerrilla warfare by vigilante types — the same sort of thing Boston has had," he said.

About 1,200 opponents of busing marched through downtown Louisville Saturday — the size of the crowd "a big disappointment" to Jack Shore, president of Union Labor Against Busing, one of the organizing groups.

Also on Saturday, a black militant group called the Burning Spear Support Committee drew about 50 persons for a march in support of busing.

School Board chairman Orville Miller, Jr., said he believes the busing program, expected to involve 20,000 children in the projected enrollment of nearly 117,000, will run more smoothly this fall.

The projected enrollment is about equal to last year's actual enrollment but down by about 13,000 from the total officials anticipated last year. This reflects "white flight" to private schools and neighboring counties. Fifteen new private schools are set to open in the county this fall.

No sabotage seen in C141 crashes

MILDENHALL, England (UPI) — Military officials Sunday ruled out sabotage in the apparently unrelated crashes of two Air Force C141 Starlifter transports in England and Greenland that killed 39 of 45 persons aboard — 31 of them Americans.

The Pentagon sent investigation teams to Mildenhall Royal AFB in England and Soendre Stroemfjord Air Force Base in Greenland to investigate the crashes of the two New Jersey-based jets, which went down within hours of each other Saturday.

"Although the accidents occurred within hours of each other and the airplanes belonged to the same unit at McGuire AFB, there appears to be absolutely no connection between the two," Air Force Maj. Michael Burch, a Pentagon spokesman, said.

"Sabotage does not appear to be a factor," he said. "It's not even being considered as a factor."

Both planes belonged to the 438th Military Airlift Wing headquartered at McGuire AFB. Lt. Col. John P. Richmond, a spokesman at McGuire, also said there was no connection between the two crashes.

The first huge freighter-troop carrier broke up in the air during lightning and thunder and crashed in flames in a sugar beet field near the village of Thorney, about 80 miles north of London at 6:45 a.m. CDT Saturday. All 14 crewmen and four passengers were killed.

Witnesses said the plane, on a regular flight from McGuire AFB, may have been struck by lightning on its approach to Mildenhall AFB.

The second crash, at 9:50 a.m. CDT, occurred while the C141 was approaching Soendre Stroemfjord on a flight down the western coast of Greenland from Thule AFB. Twenty-one of the 27 crewmen and passengers were killed.

Witnesses told investigators the plane appeared to stall during landing, struck the ground with its tail and exploded.

Two U.S. military survivors of the crash were flown to the Army Burn Center at San Antonio, Tex., for treatment. The four Danish citizens who survived were treated at a hospital in Greenland.

David Taylor, 53, a witness to the British crash, said he believed the aircraft was hit by lightning at about 2,000 feet.

"It came down very slowly, covered in flames," Taylor said. "It seemed to come apart in the air. When it hit the ground, there was quite an explosion, which I assume was the petrol (gas) tanks bursting."

The Air Force investigating team began work immediately on arrival at Mildenhall early Sunday, inspecting the crash site and starting to plot the series of events that led up to the crash, a spokesman said. He added the investigation would continue for several weeks.

Fire at Baker University kills 5

BALDWIN CITY, Kan. (UPI) — A fire apparently caused by careless smoking flashed through the Baker University Kappa Sigma fraternity house Sunday, killing five members.

The fraternity member who reported the fire at 3:05 a.m. to the town's volunteer fire department and awakened others in the house was one of the victims, authorities said. A number of others escaped unhurt. One suffered a broken foot and ankle jumping out a third-story window.

The bodies were found on the second and third floors of the 59-year-old brick structure, which had no fire escapes. Parents of the victims were called to the school, 40 miles southwest of Kansas City, to bring dental records for positive identification.

Deputy State Fire Marshal Pat Sause said he traced the fire to a divan in a television room on the first floor.

"We feel that the fire smoldered for several hours," Sause said. "It was either a cigarette or careless disposition of a match."

The smoldering caused a buildup of heat so that once the flames broke out, the fire shot up quickly to the top of the building, Sause said.

Firemen arrived five minutes after the alarm was turned in and the entire roof was already ablaze.

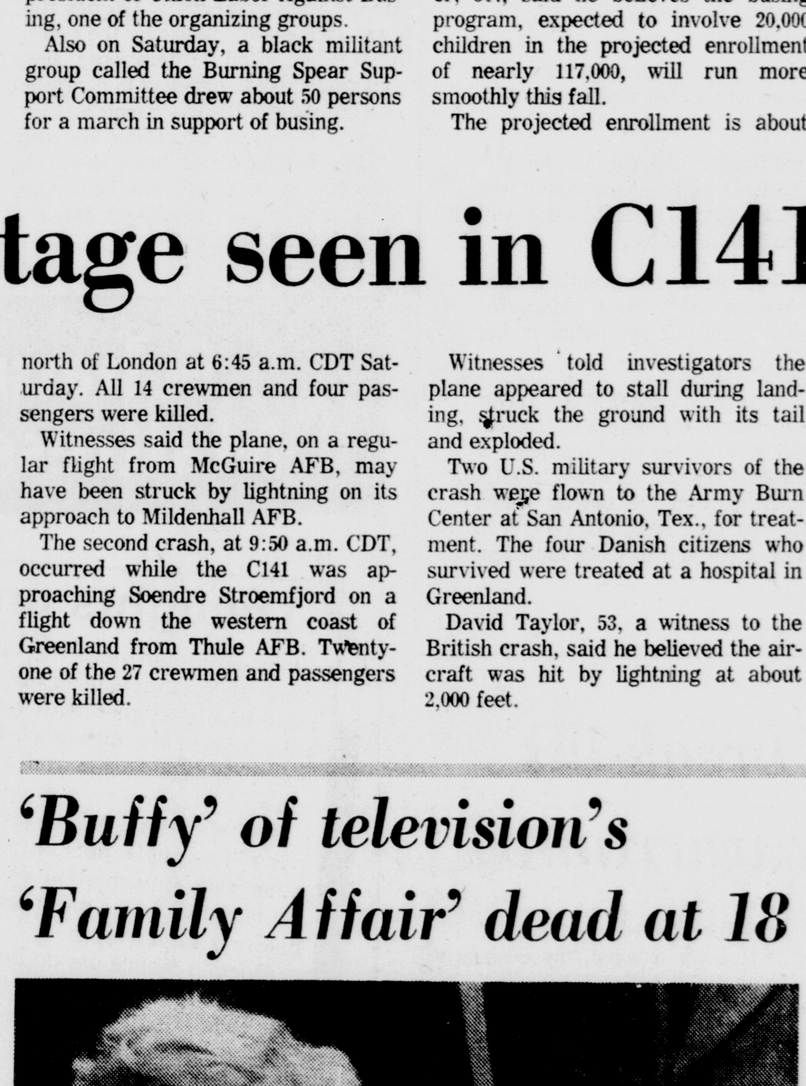
"The flames spread too fast, way, way too fast," said Steve Parsons, a member who escaped.

Fire officials said they believed at least one of the victims called the fire department after the fire started and said, "Hurry! They're burning up in here."

The Kappa Sigma fraternity house, six blocks south of the campus, was left with only its outside walls standing. The tree-shaded streets and lawns around the house were crowded with students and parents after sunrise Sunday. Many appeared to be in shock and some women were weeping.

Authorities were not sure how many fraternity members were sleeping in the house early Sunday, but believed there were about 25 to 30. They were preparing the house for rush week, which begins Tuesday.

'Buffy' of television's 'Family Affair' dead at 18



MARY ANISSA JONES, "Buffy" of the TV series "Family Affair," was found dead Saturday. She was 18. Miss Jones is shown, right, with Johnie Whitaker, who played Jody in scene from series made in 1966.

People

• Mary Anissa Jones, "Buffy" of the TV series "Family Affair," was found dead in the home of a friend Saturday, the San Diego County Coroner's office said. She was 18. The cause of death was not determined. Miss Jones, a resident of Playa Del Rey, has been staying at the home of Helen Hennessy in Oceanside. The body was found lying on the floor beside a bed by friends. The popular TV series, now in syndication, starred Brian Keith as the uncle and guardian to three youngsters, including Miss Jones as "Buffy."

• One-time gun-toting black revolutionary Eldridge Cleaver said in Washington Sunday he experienced "a religious conversion" to Christianity while he was in exile and is now "a person with a heart full of good will." Cleaver returned to the U.S. several months ago to face trial on charges, including attempted murder, stemming from a 1968 shootout between Oakland, Calif., police and members of the Black Panther Party he helped found.

• Actress Zsa Zsa Gabor was married last weekend in Las Vegas for the seventh time. She married Beverly Hills Attorney Michael O'Hara in the bridal suite of the Las Vegas Hilton three days after divorcing her sixth husband, Jack Ryan, a toy manufacturer. Miss Gabor is 56, the bridegroom is 47.

Equal opportunity vowed by Howlett

Democratic candidate Michael Howlett said in Hampton Sunday that if he is elected governor of Illinois, three small town mayors would have the "same opportunities" to present their problems to him as Chicago Mayor Richard Daley. Howlett, trying to shed his image of being tied to Daley, brought up the issue while speaking at a "Salute to Labor" picnic sponsored by the Rock Island County Democratic Central Committee.

He named three local Democratic mayors he thought were present at the function. Dennis Jacobs of East Moline, who actually was not on hand; William Tatman of Silvis, and Richard Work of Milan. "I want them to know and I want you to know that they will have the same opportunities to present their problems to the governor of Illinois as will the mayor of the city of Chicago," Howlett said.

"These mayors are going to run their towns. Dick Daley's going to run Chicago. And Mike Howlett and nobody else is going to run the State of Illinois." Howlett appeared in Hampton while stumping across western and central Illinois Sunday. He also made stops in Sterling and Pekin, promising reform of state government and Illinois' budget.

Fire hits section of Watseka

Fire raged through a section on the North Side of Watseka Sunday, destroying the local Illinois Public Aid Dept. office and three businesses. One fireman was injured while battling the flames. Fire Chief Vic Cahoe estimated damage at $213,000. Authorities said the blaze broke out along Illinois Rte. 1 at the north edge of town at about 2:30 a.m. Besides the public aid office, a tool company, a chemical company and a dress manufacturing shop were destroyed and a tavern and another chemical company were damaged. One fireman suffered minor injuries.

Doubt cast on AIP campaign ability

As recently as two weeks ago, leaders of the American Independent Party hoped to entice a national figure like Ronald Reagan to accept their presidential nomination. That kind of coup, they argued, could win them enough Republicans votes to kill the GOP and make the AIP a conservative political fixture. They didn't get Reagan. Instead, they wound up their convention in Chicago this weekend with avowed segregationist Lester Maddox as their standard bearer. And they generated enough intraparty feuds to cast serious doubt on the party's ability to wage a successful campaign between now and the Nov. 2 general election.

For example:

• Howard Phillips, the influential chairman of the Conservative Caucus, said after Maddox' nomination he will not support the AIP ticket. Asked why, he said, "Because I'm not a segregationist."

• Richard Viguerie, a Virginia millionaire who ran for the AIP vice presidential nomination, said he feels Maddox' candidacy will help the Republicans rather than hurt them, since Maddox will draw votes from Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter.

• Several delegations virtually deserted the convention after Maddox' nomination. The New Mexico AIP head, Mercedes Phillips, said she will keep Maddox' name off the ballot in her state.

Maddox and his running mate, former Madison, Wis., Mayor William Dyke, both recognized the danger of divisiveness. "I plead with you for unity," Maddox told delegates in the final moments of the three-day gathering. Before he spoke, though, all but a handful of the estimated 700 delegates departed from the Conrad Hilton Hotel's International Ballroom. "It's our duty now," Dyke said in his acceptance speech, "to unify our party and to unify the country."

Ex-FBI chief: break-ins by the agency warranted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contending that "somebody has to come forward and stick up for the FBI," Mark Felt — former associate director of the bureau — said Sunday warrantless break-ins of militant underground groups were justified and he would order them again.

Felt, who has admitted approving break-ins at the offices of the Weather Underground in 1972, said they were justified on national security grounds.

"I'm not denying approving these," Felt said in a televised interview (CBS' "Face the Nation"). He held up a newspaper for the cameras he said was published by the Underground taking credit for "hundreds of arsons and bombings."

"Now you're either going to have an FBI that tries to stop the bombings before they happen or you're not, and I suspect it will be up to Congress now to make a decision, but personally I think it's justified and I'd do it again tomorrow," Felt said.

He added Congress should pass legislation authorizing break-ins of domestic and foreign organizations under a court order.

"Somebody has to come forward and stick up for the FBI," Felt said. "It's chic to criticize the FBI now, and actually the FBI is a wonderful organization. . ."

Felt, who is under investigation by a federal grand jury, said he did not know if he would be indicted for approving the illegal break-ins, but "I think they'll need a scapegoat."

"If I am indicted, my defense will be that the national security interest of the country was paramount and these are national security cases."

Felt, who was associate director under both J. Edgar Hoover and L. Patrick Gray, said Hoover ordered a halt to break-ins in 1966 because "I think he felt he didn't have the support of the attorney general and the President."

"The bulk of the break-ins were in connection with a program called Anagram, which was the stealing of cryptographic material from foreign embassies and foreign consulates," Felt added.

He did not elaborate on the program, but said since it mainly benefited the National Security Agency and the CIA "Hoover felt that in the absence of any support from the attorney general and the White House he was going to stop it."

The former No. 3 man at the FBI said past attorneys general, whom he would not name, supported warrantless break-ins.

Felt said he approved the 1972 break-ins while Gray was FBI director because "I thought I was doing what Mr. Gray wanted." In addition, he admitted approving another break-in at the Dallas headquarters of the Palestinian Liberation Organization which he said blocked plans for "all sorts of terrorism in the United States."

Democratic Vice Presidential hopeful Walter Mondale greeted crowds...

Mondale raps Ford at Mikva rally

by WANDALYN RICE

Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., boosted the campaign of U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, at a Morton Grove forest preserve rally Saturday with an attack on the "failures" of President Gerald Ford's administration.

Calling Mikva "the ablest congressman in Washington," Mondale told the crowd of about 500 volunteers, "Anybody who can assemble a crowd as beautiful as you are and as enthusiastic as you are on a Saturday morning is going to win."

The appearance was the first full-scale campaign stop in Illinois for Mondale since Democratic Presidential candidate Jimmy Carter chose him as his running mate.

The rally went smoothly despite an early morning appearance by former U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, Mikva's opponent, who parked a car with a "Young" poster on it at the entrance to the forest preserve as Mikva's staff was arriving to prepare for the event.

Mondale cited a newspaper story quoting Ford as planning to campaign on the issues of employment, housing, health care and education. He said, "If he campaigns on those issues the election is over and we have won. That's a list of Republican failures, not accomplishments."

MIKVA, WHO defeated Young in 1974, thanked Mondale for his appearance and recalled that two years ago Mondale campaigned on Mikva's behalf.

"One of the reasons it is so important for me to get you here," Mikva told Mondale, "is that you make Democrats very glad you're a Democrat, Republicans sorry that you aren't a Republican and everyone glad you're an American."

Mikva presented Mondale with a campaign T-shirt with "Mikva" on the front and "Carter-Mondale" on the back saying, "I hope you don't think I'm going to coattail you."

Mondale jokingly called the T-shirt "the most beautiful shirt of its kind I've ever seen" and said, "I'm going to wear it at the inaugural ball."

In addition, Mondale assured the crowd, "You're all invited to the inaugural ball and free lodging and a free party and (Mikva) will pay for it out of his own pocket."

Schaumburg Mattress Factory

Thoughts on a Mattress

For over three years our little mattress factory has been doing an ever increasing business by attracting the astute, inquisitive customer with the intelligence and experience to recognize the difference between some so-called "discount" price delusion and a top quality product at a low price.

And we would like to clarify one point - this a factory; not a "Factory Outlet" or "Factory Closeout Mart" or some other misrepresentation of just another retail store - we actually make our mattresses and box springs right here before your very eyes.

Once in awhile we do get a customer who says, "That's not cheap. I can buy one cheaper at so-and-so's."

The funny thing is that nine out of ten of these customers, after shopping all the "cheap" mattresses in the area, come back and buy ours.

So it gives us a lot of satisfaction to know that there is still a place in this economy of ours for a small company that wants to produce a quality piece of merchandise. And we try to let our customers know we appreciate the fact that they come in to see us. It is really surprising how many have taken their time to call and even write to thank us just because our delivery men were so courteous and helpful when we delivered our merchandise.

Kids find golf ball sales a 'fairway' to make living

by DIANE MERMIGAS

From the mouths of babes who hang around the golf course during the long summer days comes the cry, "Hey, mister, wanna buy four balls for a dollar?"

They are vacationing school children turned entrepreneurs and they stand along the fairway's edge, clutching bags that bulge with the tiny, pitted balls.

They are there at the break of dawn as sleepy executives stumble on to the links for a round of golf before their work day begins.

AND THEY stay until the early evening as groups of women golfers stroll the course in idle conversation before going home to cook dinner for the clan.

Some golfers look to these young businessmen for a good buy on stray golf balls.

But others consider these ambitious tykes sheer aggravation because too often the children are in the way of a good shot or steal golf balls off the fairway to replenish their stock.

"These kids are as young as about 10 and as old as 16 or 17. They hide in the bushes along Camp McDonald Road and then jump out on the fairway to pickup golf balls that have been hit there.

COLLECTING GOLF balls usually is a project for about three or four kids. After all, it takes a lot of courage to swipe the super shot of a duffer who is on the verge of making a long-desired birdie.

There are, however, easier ways to collect golf balls that any neighborhood kid in jeans and a T-shirt could tell you about.

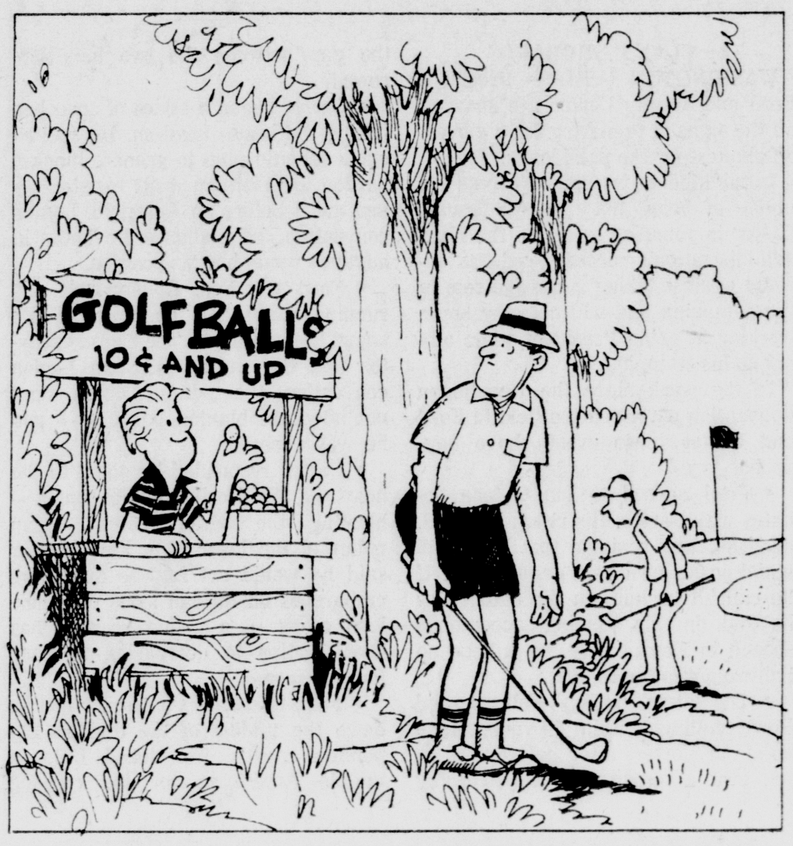
"Those kids find literally thousands of stray balls each year in the brush along the course, in water hazards or just off to the side of the course somewhere," said Jim Johnson, assistant pro at Old Orchard Country Club, Mount Prospect.

Some golfers don't mind so long as the kids don't get in their way or get hit with the ball, he said.

"We try to keep kids from doing it, but it happens every summer and there's not much we can do," he said.

MOST LOCAL golf courses like Old Orchard, Rob Roy near Prospect Heights, the Mount Prospect Country Club, which is operated by the village's park district and the Chevy Chase Country Club in Wheeling are not fenced in. The natural borders of trees and shrubbery there make a perfect hiding place for kids.

"It's a good way to make money. It's easy to find balls. They're all over. Except it's hard to sell them because they won't let you on the course," said Jimmy, 12, a smooth operator who wouldn't divulge his last name or address for fear his parents would wise-up to his summer pastime.



Most kids learn how to peddle their wares discreetly on the course so as not to upset the management.

"One time we caught a kid selling golf balls out of a big bushel basket in front of the clubhouse and we just told him to leave," said Emil Esposito, manager of the Mount Prospect Park District's golf course.

ALTHOUGH GOLFERS look upon the practice with mixed emotions, many outwardly will admit that they watch for their small friends every week to make a considerable savings in buying the golf balls they need.

One good-natured golfer who initials his golf balls said he recently had to buy back one of his own golf balls from a kid for a quarter.

"I look for the same little fellow every Wednesday morning. He sells me some good balls and we both go on our way," the golfer said.

It seems that, just like the kids, no golfer wants to go on record as buying golf balls "under the table." They don't want their golfing partners to know.

"In most ways what these kids do is harmless. It's really funny to watch them hustle across the course with golfballs dropping out of their pockets," another golfer said.

"I don't know what's more fun. Trying to hit these balls around the course or just walking around, picking them up and selling them. These kids might not have such a bad idea," he said.

Officials seek Salt Creek aid

engineer on the project told The Herald that the communities Howlett named will be protected from spring flooding by the work already funded.

They are downstream from the Busse Woods reservoir, the engineer said, where the level of Salt Creek can be controlled by the reservoir's dams.

Because Howlett "may be my next boss," the engineer asked to remain anonymous.

He added, however, that Howlett is "not 100 per cent wrong."

The reservoir itself can do nothing to control flooding along the upstream sections of Salt Creek, he said.

The stalled creekbed widening work — called Reach F by the engineers — is crucial for Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Inverness, the engineer said, Because it is designed to eliminate the last bottleneck for stormwater headed for the Busse Woods reservoir.

DON VONNAHMY of the Illinois Division of Water Resources, said the southernmost 3,000 feet of Reach F — between the reservoir and the southern edge of the Three Fountains apartment complex in Rolling Meadows — already is being widened with $150,000 in state funds that survived cuts in a department appropriation bill.

Work on the remaining mile is waiting for state right-of-way money and federal construction plans and grants, he said.

The House's failure to approve additional funds has delayed the right-of-way acquisition, but Vonnahmy said "it's hard to say how much it's delayed us because the federal plans aren't final, and we don't even know what their right-of-way requirements are."

Top contenders from both parties vie for the championship of the people

by CLAY F. RICHARDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford and Jimmy Carter are showing all the signs of preparing for a gloves-off slugfest for the presidency.

In addition to trying to reverse his image of being fuzzy on the issues, Carter is pounding away on the Ford administration's record. Ford has decided against taking a passive role in the campaign and will not stay home working at being President while others do his stumping.

In the week since the Republican Convention narrowed the field to Ford and Carter these events have happened.

• Ford agreed to face-to-face debates with Carter. His risky, but bold, decision, was a signal that Ford will stand on his own as a campaigner. If he can hit as hard in the debates as he did in his ringing acceptance speech in Kansas City, he will be no lightweight in the contest.

• The latest Gallup Poll showed Ford pulling within 10 percentage points of Carter, after being down 23 per cent a month ago. As expected the gap between the two had narrowed.

• Carter began a series of speeches hitting the issues head on. He spelled out a specific plan to grant a blanket pardon for Vietnam draft resisters — and did it before an American Legion convention, an audience he knew in advance would boo his position.

• Ford sent Sen. Robert Dole, his running mate and one-man "Truth squad" after Carter. The Kansas senator told the same American Legion convention the administration does not advocate blanket pardons — and he was cheered.

• Carter responded by going to the heart of the Ford political base — blasting the administraton's farm policy at the Iowa State Fair. Carter said he would not impose any more embargoes on foreign sales of American crops — a policy he said has been leading to decreasing markets for the farmer.

• Ford is steering a narrow course down the middle of the divided Republican party. He picked Dole, a middle American, for his running mate, James Baker, a Texan but not a staunch conservative, to run his campaign, and Mary Louise Smith, an Iowan as GOP national chairman. At his Vail summit he summoned both Vice President Nelson Rockefeller from the left and former Texas Gov. John B. Connally from the right to give him counsel.

The head-on confrontation in the four debates is shaping up as the decisive factor in the campaign. Ford will rehearse with a Jimmy Carter stand-in before facing the Georgian before the television lights.

The issues will boil down to Ford's record as president over the past two years versus Carter's thus far hazy stand on such major items as reorganizing the federal government. In the first post-Watergate election, the battle will be a good clean, but hard-fought contest.

In a year when an unknown former Georgia governor walked away with the Democratic nomination and an incumbent president almost was denied nomination by his own party, there are more surprises yet to come.

The way we see it

Ring in Crisis Central

It's the end of August — the time of year for Crisis Central to rise out of the dust and look for ways to make headlines.

Crisis Central is the invention of the Illinois Education Assn., a statewide teachers union with a number of affiliates in the Northwest suburbs.

Headquartered in Springfield, Crisis Central is a clearinghouse for information on contract negotiations in Illinois school districts that failed to reach a settlement during the spring or summer.

It is part of the over-all "game" that so often typifies contract negotiations today.

One of the first official acts of Crisis Central is to release the names of districts that have entered a "critical" stage in negotiations. There are the accompanying grave words that X number of districts are on the brink of a strike and a bit of appropriate rhetoric from the IEA's executive secretary, Curtis Plott.

After the "critical" list is released, local school officials sometimes react with amazement that the term has been applied to their district and there are the expected rounds of platitudes about good faith bargaining from all sides.

Crisis Central also offers a daily "crisis message" with information on current and upcoming strikes and other crisis tidbits.

We have long disputed the need for local school districts to come to the crisis stage in negotiations and have advocated earlier bargaining and better negotiation procedures as ways to avoid problems.

We must question the need for a Crisis Central which, in its title and intent, appears to promote and feed on local problems.

There is tension and trauma even in congenial bargaining. There is little need for one more element within an organization to exist solely to throw fuel on burning fires.

Tom Tiede's column

Another grand platform

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Political campaign platforms are inevitably nailed together with pegs of powder. The planks are in place but will support no weight. As Oscar Levant once remarked about politicians and the philosophies they formalize, they have a propensity for doublecrossing such bridges when they come to them.

It's remembered, for example, that the party platform for Benjamin Harrison included references to prosperity and plenty for all. Thus, as legend has it, when Harrison was elected and once saw a man forced by deprivation to eat grass on the White House lawn, he acted quickly to rectify the situation. Go around in back, the President told the poor fellow, "the food grows longer there."

So it is that the 1976 version of the Republican party's highly suspicious platform may be nothing more than additional Grand Old Platitudes. Yet there is at least one brief bit of it which gives hopes to the dreamers. Addressing itself to a "government that works," the party demands "repeal of legislation which permits automatic increases in the salaries of members of Congress." It suggests that if Congress wants more pay, it must vote publicly or the right, thus standing answerable to its employers, the people.

At casual reading, the plank seems unadventurous. Being for public accountability in America is about as risky as coming out foursquare for adequate rainfall in the grain belt. Yet in fact the repeal position is a courageous one for the GOP. Its presidential nominee, Gerald Ford, has for some time believed Congress should not have to bother with the democratic process regarding salary hikes, that the increases should be regular, substantial and fully automatic.

The issue goes back to July of last year, when the congressional leadership prevailed on old colleague Ford to conspire with them in insulating legislators from the prickly effects of inflation. The leadership wanted annual cost of living increases, but did not dare risk voting for it on a yearly basis. And thus a plot was formed.

The leadership created a bill providing for the automatic escalations. The bill was buried as a rider to obscure legislation regarding post office salaries. Then before the media or the people got wise, it passed through both houses like a shot with no sound. Good Jerry Ford, the man of the people, signed it before the echo of the aye votes had died. Salaries jumped instantly from $42,500 to $44,600, foregoing the possibility that Senator Kennedy's children might go hungry, and insuring a like annual impetuity.

The tactics did not delight everyone. The bill barely passed, 272 to 242 (the difference in the House was a single vote). And since then several members who originally favored it have had second thoughts; Rep. Robert Drinan, for one, who also is a Catholic priest, has decided that his working class constituency in Massachusetts feels his yes vote may have been incompatible with his clerical vow of poverty.

Of course the nearing elections may have something to do with renewed discomfort in Congress regarding the matter. Iowa Rep. Charles Grassley, who has filed seven bills to repeal the cost of living nonsense, says any member who voted for it "has the potential for trouble." Grassley reminds that another pay hike is due Oct. 1. He says a second hefty increase is probable early next year when a presidential commission makes its quadrennial recommendations on congressional salaries. And then there is the hike of Oct. 1, 1977.

"We could get three increases of many thousands of dollars in the next 14 months," says Grassley. "It could add up to from $15 to $20,000. "I don't think this will sit well with the American public."

Hence the Republicans, who can ill afford a single angry voter, are asking for a return to the days when the people had at least tangential control over legislative pay. It's part of a theme called "Clean up Congress." Quite right. Good thought. Now let's hear it from the man who made the automatic pay bill law, that staunch guardian of Senator Kennedy's anemic children — Gerald R. Ford.

Steps to stop Medicaid fraud crucial

The Illinois General Assembly and Gov. Daniel Walker have taken some important steps in solving the problems of fraud in the state's Medicaid program.

Walker last week signed into law two bills which should serve to cut down on fraud. One bill will require doctors and hospitals to detail laboratory charges to assure that lab tests for which the state is billed are actually performed. The other bill requires signed receipts from public aid recipients for drugs, eyeglasses and medical equipment.

The measures are a sign that the legislature is taking seriously the revelations of abuses in the state Medicaid system. If adequately enforced, they will help to cut down on the massive waste of state funds that has resulted from fraud.

These bills, by themselves, certainly will not solve the whole problem facing the Medicaid system; they will help. As the need for other reform measures becomes clear, we hope the General Assembly will enact them.

Deaf children and adults deserve same treatment as hearing people

"Men and women have the right to be free."

These words were said by Senator Dole in the Crown Center last week.

These words should certainly include the education and well being of our deaf population and, there are about 13 million deaf or hearing impaired scattered throughout America today.

About a month ago I was invited to attend a board meeting of the NSSEO Governing Board Joint Agreement, at which the issue of deaf education in the Northwest Suburban area came up.

Present at the meeting were a number of parents of the deaf whose children are now attending school in this area from grades 1 through 8. Two deaf adults who were interested to find out about the chances a deaf child has to a good education in public school, were also present. The deaf adults had an interpreter with them.

From listening to the discussion, I gathered that there is a program for deaf children at Wilmot School in Deerfield (North suburban) and another program at Kensington School in Arlington Heights (Northwest suburban), and the parents of the deaf children are asking for a choice where to send their child, based on the education program and according to the number of deaf children enrolled in the various grades. The school board feels the child should go to Kensington, where there are deaf children attending other grades, but no child attends second grade, that would make the one child the only deaf child attending second grade. In the other school, Wilmot, there would be several deaf children attending second grade together, so creating a closer feeling of togetherness. The parents of the child being forced to attend second grade in Kensington, with the help of other parents, have taken a lawyer to fight the case through, because they do not want their child to feel more isolated than absolutely necessary.

The facts are that deaf people are indeed very isolated in the world, because there are more hearing people than deaf people, and that fact will not be changing. A child should not be deprived of the right to friendship with another deaf child of the same age group.

It came up during the meeting that now there are interpreters available to interpret for the deaf in schools, in court, and at meetings and religious gatherings, but sorry to say there was no interpreter furnished to serve the deaf adults. The general feeling of the board was: "If the deaf want to know what goes on, let them hire their own interpreter." When it came to a vote about having an interpreter present at those meetings where deaf education was discussed, the vote was 7 against, 3 for.

A much better understanding could be achieved in NSSEO by having at least one deaf adult on the board to advise in planning educational programs for the deaf students.

Do we hearing people have the right to make all the rules about deaf education without consulting with the parents, or adult deaf groups, should we not strive toward more involvement with deaf people or any kind of handicapped people, and could we do something to involve more adult deaf in discussions about deaf education?

To me, as a parent of the deaf, and very much involved helping the deaf and trying to understand the way they feel, it is of greatest importance that deaf education is brought up to date, so that every deaf person can understand what it is all about. After all, they have human rights, too.

Thieves don't need any extra help

Speaking dollar-wise

by Robert S. Rosefsky

The tale was almost so bizarre as to put its truth in doubt. But, then, that's the way it often is with truth.

The family had parked the car in a shopping center lot. When they returned from their shopping trip, the car was gone. They notified the police of the apparent theft, and began the tedius process of filing the insurance forms.

That evening the car mysteriously reappeared in their driveway. In it was a note from the supposed thief. It said, in effect, that he was terriby sorry for the inconvenience that he had caused the family. He had come across a sudden emergency and needed a car immediately. Theirs was available so he took it. He had had it washed and filled with gas. As a token of his apology, he hoped that the family would use and enjoy some tickets to a pro basketball game being played locally the next evening.

the tickets were in the glove compartment, and the family, rather bemused by the whole incident, called off the police and made use of the tickets the following night.

When they returned from the basketball game their house had been stripped of virtually every item of immediate cash value. Guess by whom.

A clever setup indeed, and a dramatic warning that it doesn't pay to advertise when your house will be empty and available to burglars.

We can unwittingly post such advertisements in a number of ways. A burglar can easily peruse the society pages and obituary columns of the local paper to determine when a family might be absent from their home attending a wedding, a funeral or any similar happening. An inadvertent remark which could be overheard by a stranger could tip off the wrong people that you'll be away on a vacation, or out to dinner, or at a basketball game.

Fair warning is directed to air travelers who have been victimized lately by a clever ploy: apparent panhandlers circulate around the entrances to airports, attempting to get close enough to departing passengers to read their luggage tags, thus learning where unoccupied homes and apartments can easily be found.

CB radio owners, with their antennas prominentely visible on their cars, are mobile advertisements that there is something worth stealing in the car. Authorities duly note that the rise in CB radio thefts is in direct proportion to the rise in the number of radios in use.

Perhaps the best precaution against a home burglary is a house sitter. On long absences alert neighbors that you'll be away and ask them to report and/or investigate any strange happenings. Notify the police of your absence, and follow their simple suggestions regarding stoppage of mail and other home deliveries, leaving lights burning and so on.

Crime can pay, and handsomely, for the burglar who reads your open invitation. There's no guarantee against it happening, but simple steps can minimize the chances.

Executive suite going sour?

Exodus of top bosses accelerating

NEW YORK (UPI) — Being the head of a major corporation isn't yet as hazardous as managing a big league baseball team — but it's getting that way.

The exodus from the top executive chamber — forced or otherwise — seems to be accelerating, says John D. Arnold, president of Applied Synergetics Inc., a management consulting firm in Waltham, Mass.

Arnold said 60 major companies in the United States had changes in top executive offices in the first half of this year.

FORBES MAGAZINE reported the chief executives of 117 big companies were changed in 1975.

Arnold thinks the proportion of those who were fired or forced to retire accelerated. "At the very moment his public relations department is distributing a release announcing the executive's departure 'for personal reasons,' or for ' a greater opportunity to be announced,' the executive himself is trying to put together the pieces of his own puzzle: What happened?"

Lester Korn, president of Korn-Ferry International Inc., a leading international executive ' recruiting firm, also said the rate of change in the chief executive's chair is accelerating, but Korn doesn't think as many top bosses are being fired as Arnold believes. "I think voluntary retirement is a bigger factor," Korn said.

IN ANY CASE, Korn said, the first half of 1976 saw a big increase in demand for senior executives, largely because of company expansion.

Steven Green who, at age 30, took over leadership of Robino Ladd, the large Miami building firm, when it got into serious trouble, also said the rate of change in the top executive suite has accelerated. He agreed with both Arnold and Korn that the top executive must bear many pressures that those on even the next highest level don't face.

"Harry Truman put it succinctly by pointing to his desk and saying, 'The buck stops here,' " Korn said. "Modern instant communications and the computer put a lot of fast pressures on top executives that their predecessors didn't have."

Arnold was quite specific about the kind of special pressure burdens the top executive must withstand.

ONE IS THE pressure "to identify those core executives on whom his success really depends . . . This takes on an element of 'feel,' " Arnold said. "The big boss must quickly learn who are the real decision makers and breakers in the company."

Next, Arnold said, the chief executive must estimate and start to shape the expectations and attitudes of the other executives and he must quickly discover the "gut issues" confronting the company and place their priorites.

He also must learn whom to trust, how to handle his time, how to avoid physical exhaustion, how to work with groups instead of one-to-one meetings, how to avoid being over-aggressive and impatient, and how to accept the situation and adapt when one of his pet projects threatens to become an embarrassing failure.

Johns supports McBride for steel union chief

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Maneuvering to defeat insurgents within the United Steelworkers union, Vice President John F. Johns Sunday withdrew his bid for the union presidency and threw his support behind a "unity" ticket headed by Lloyd McBride of St. Louis, Mo.

Johns' withdrawal, announced before the opening of a union convention today, set up a potential two-way race between McBride and self-styled reformer Ed Sadlowski of East Chicago, Ind.

Union members will vote next Feb. 8 to select a successor for retiring Pres. I.W. Abel.

Sadlowski, 38, a relentless critic of Abel, was expected to announce his candidacy soon. But his chances of winning were reduced by Johns' decision to support McBride.

Both McBride and Johns are loyal to Abel and the programs he has established during 11 years as president of the 1.4 million-member union. Their dual candidacies had threatened to split the vote among Abel loyalists.

Abel, 68, who will retire next June because of age, has remained officially neutral about the election of a successor. But sources said he "pushed" Johns and McBride to negotiate a single slate.

The new numbers must also reach several other departments such as accounting, repair, switching and plant installation.

Updated directory pages are printed every working day.

Proofs of the directory pages are scrutinized before the directories are sent to press at the R.R. Donnelley Co. in Dwight, 75 miles south of Chicago. Still, errors slip through.

Like most other giant bureaucracies, an error at Illinois Bell can occur at one of several levels. The Hoffman Estates error occurred at a regional business office in Wheaton when the Hoffman Estates Village Hall telephone order listing the various departments, was typed up without the main number.

"The phone company had the whole thing straightened out in 48 hours," Mrs. Hayter said about her number mixup.

Who says Bell doesn't try hard?

suburban living

DEMOCRATIC parenting is the aim of Family Education Association units that meet regularly to study the child-rearing techniques of the late Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs. Others, meeting more informally, also get together on a twice-a-month basis to study Dreikurs as these mothers do. They include, from left, Anita Cohen, Palatine; Jeanneann Sattler, Mount Prospect; Cheri Neri, Schaumburg; and Trudy Reinhardt, Palatine.

A new approach to child-rearing

by BETSY BROOKER

Should children be expected to obey parents' authority without question, or should children be guided and inspired as an equal?

"Children are persons and have rights just as parents do" claims Mrs. Louise Shrank, member of a group studying Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs' child-rearing techniques.

"Deny them respect," she continued, "and nothing in the family goes well."

Give them respect, traditionalists would argue, and they'll take over the household.

How to win children's cooperation is being debated in lecture halls, schools and living rooms throughout the area as parents join groups studying Dreikurs' book "Children: The Challenge."

A basic premise of this 40-year veteran of child psychology states, "We must turn from the obsolete and autocratic method of demanding submission to a new order based on the principles of feedom and responsibility.

"OUR CHILDREN can no longer be forced into compliance; they must be stimulated and encouraged into voluntarily taking their part in maintaining order."

A native of Vienna, Dreikurs practiced in Chicago from 1939 to his death in 1972. He was professor emeritus of psychiatry at the Chicago Medical School and director of the Alfred Adler (founder of the school of "individual psychology") Institute of Chicago.

"Children: The Challenge" is heralded as one of the best child-rearing primers by parents and counselors alike.

"Dreikurs has a practical approach to child raising that really works," said Mrs. Kate Warner, Adler student and counselor at Sacred Heart of Mary High School. "If you buy his philosophy — that you have no control over anyone's behavior but your own — then it is easier to apply the specifics."

Proponents of Adler-Dreikurs techniques established a not-for-profit corporation, now called Family Education Association (FEA), in 1936 to promote their philosophy of democratic family life.

THE ASSOCIATION members, 500 strong in the Northwest suburban area, operate counseling centers, discussion groups, study series and a speakers' bureau, all on volunteer time. A FEA group counseling session is held free of charge at Miner Junior High School in Arlington Heights once a month (Call 253-4321 for additional information).

Yet, despite Dreikurs' popularity, he has his critics who charge his theories are too great a break from traditional child-rearing practices, require an impossible level of objectivity, or worse yet, promote chaos.

The debate — autocratic versus democratic parenting — is being led by FEA members throughout the area. Dreikur study groups were also held last year and will resume in September at both High School Dist. 211's Adult Education Program and Sacred Heart of Mary High School.

On a more informal basis, several women in their thirties, who have left careers within the last four years to begin families, formed their own group to study Dreikurs. The women (Mrs. Trudy Reihardt, Palatine; Mrs. Jeanneann Sattler, Mount Prospect; Mrs. Louise Schrank, Palatine; Mrs. Cheri Neri, Schaumburg; and Mrs. Anita Cohen, Palatine) take turns meeting in each other's homes twice a month.

THE GROUP'S formation was a product of the young mothers' dissatisfaction with "do as I say or else" approaches to parenting.

"Recent advances in psychology have made us aware of things such as self-concept and the emotional factors that affect development," explained Jeanneann.

"The traditional approaches to child-raising just don't encourage children's self-confidence," added Trudy. "Children aren't given enough responsibility because they might fail."

Cheri complained that she "spent my whole childhood waiting to grow up because the traditional approaches are always saying 'wait until you're an adult.'

"Spock has been around for a long time," added Cheri, "but there is so much more to parenting. Just being nice is not enough. A lot of people are well-intentioned, but you need guidelines too."

These women, all students in the '60s, see that era as a time of challenging tradition and feel part of it.

SEVERAL PARENTS of teens, however, expressed difficulty in switching parenting approaches midstream. Studying Dreikurs, they said, did not change how they rear their children, but it did give them a better understanding of their children.

A mother with 10 children, ranging from 4 to 19 years, believes traditional approaches aren't the absolute answer. But she is not employing Dreikurs' methods afer taking the Sacred Heart course because "it's too drastic a change after 19 years."

She and her husband also believe "there are some things children shouldn't question but do because I said so."

Still with preschoolers, Mrs. Sue Kurtze, Palatine, who took the Dist. 211 course, said she "always believed parents were the authority and children shouldn't question. But then I had my own and they did question and I had to accept that."

The uncertainty or confusion some parents feel today Dreikurs attributes to "the impact of Democracy that has transformed our social atmosphere and made the traditional methods of lhild raising obsolete."

THE WORRIED PARENT, says Dreikurs, who reacts by trying to over-protect or over-control his child, will have either a fearful child or a never-ending power struggle on his hands.

He advises parents to not feel sorry for their children ("We cannot protect our children from life"), to encourage independence ("never do for a child what he can do for himself") and to walk away from fights ("no one can fight alone").

Power struggles, pitting parent against child, are a waste of families' time and energy says Dreikurs because "orders naturally invite resistance."

Instead of saying "do it because I said so," he advises, "we do it because it is necessary." Not "children are to be seen and not heard," but "listen, respect your child." Not power, but influence.

Condemning punishment, he calls

A thousand women ask about being astronaut

A thousand women have told the federal space agency they would like to become astronauts for the nation's space shuttle.

Officials are accepting it all in stride.

"I've been pleased with the number of responses and with the quality of people, including women, who've responded," said Duane Ross at the Johnson Space Center's astronaut recruiting office in Houston.

"We've mailed out about 4,000 responses to inquiries. I would guess that probably 25 per cent of those inquiries have been from the female population.

"They (women) seem to be very pleased that there's an opportunity for them to enter the space program."

ROSS SAID HIS staff had made no tabulation of requests for information since the February announcement that 30 new astronauts, including some women, would be chosen by July, 1978.

The aim is to have them on board for two years of training prior to the next full-scale manned mission, the orbital shuttle tentatively planned for 1980.

Ross said 30 (15 in an "astronaut-pilot" category and 15 in a "mission-specialist" group) is a minimum number and that more might be selected.

He said many more men and women likely would apply before the June 30, 1977 deadline.

"Most of these people are going to wait until late to apply because it gives you more time to build up your credentials, your academic background, flying time."

ASIDE FROM the selection of women, Ross said,the first astronaut recruitment program since 1967 is similar to six earlier selections that chose 76 trainees, all men.

"I think the approach we're taking is just about the same. But the requirements are quite a bit less stringent than they have been in the past."

Not all the new recruits must be pilots and none has to have advanced degrees, although Ross said flight experience and advanced science-engineering degrees are desirable.

"Obviously, it still will have to be someone in good physical condition to stand the rigors of space flight. We want somebody who's going to be committed to the program."

No school bells this fall for publicity chairmen

The Herald publicity seminar teachers haven't gone on strike; they just feel that area organization publicity chairmen don't need the help they once did, so this year there will be no workshop.

The decision to cancel the seminar was due to the newspaper's growth and its policy of consolidation of club news and briefer notices for easier reading. It is also difficult to find a time when all clubs can be represented at a seminar because so many women are working, homemaking and volunteering.

FOR THOSE WHO still feel they need help, The Heralds have a handbook on writing club publicity available free at our offices. Questions will also be answered over the phone.

Those submitting news are requested to include with each release a phone number where they can be reached during daytime office hours.

Velcro ideal for wrap skirt

Sew simple
by Eunice Farmer

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I dislike the long ties that are so often found on wrap-around skirts. Is there any way I could apply Velcro to my skirt, or would the weight of the skirt be too much strain on the Velcro to keep it closed? — Mary E.

Dear Mary,

Velcro is a trade name for one of the most wonderful inventions of all time. Thank goodness we are finding more and more uses for it. For those of you who are unfamiliar with it, Velcro is made of two strips of tape that have hundreds of tiny hooks and loops that actually lock together tightly the instant you press them together, yet they peel apart easily.

It is light weight, non-jamming and easy to align, and would be perfect for wrap skirts. It also works perfectly for other skirts and pants — eliminating hooks, snaps or buttons on waistbands.

When constructing a waistband to use with Velcro, you must allow several extra inches to extend beyond the center front or center back, on the side of the waistband that will be under the top or finished edge of the waistband.

This will not show because you will apply two inches of Velcro to the inside of the waistband and it will lap over the extension of the waistband where you will add another two inches of tape. Simply press them together. It really works beautifully.

Dear Readers:

I know all of you have been following the fashion write-ups in your local papers. Unfortunately, they so often highlight the extremes rather than the styles that are conservative enough for most of us. Today, I'll cover the subject of pants.

You've heard over and over that pants are finished and skirts will take their place — don't for a minute believe it! Pants for fall are definitely important and every collection featured some version of pants. There is no one look that is right; you must choose the type of pants that are right for your own figure.

With the men's wear fabrics and the haberdashery look, the trouser pant is perhaps the most popular. The trouser pant usually has a fly front; soft pleats, just below the waistband, that give a little ease; and a straight leg, usually uncuffed. Since the fabrics have body and are usually woven of firm fibers, they are rarely lined.

Additional variations of pants include: culottes, which have the look of a skirt because of the wider leg; jodhpurs; knickers; and the cigaret slim pants that are being featured for evening. So take your pick, gals, but examine your own figure and choose the style most flattering to you.

Be sure to make your pants from the nicest quality fabric you can find; you'll be surprised how much you can save! If you choose a beautiful quality wool that sells for around $15 per yard, your pants will only cost about $23, at the most, to make. These same pants would cost between $70 and $100 retail — quite a savings!

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Many of the patterns that call for knit fabrics don't require or suggest the application of a zipper. Since I'm still old-fashioned enough not to want to mess my hair when I take a dress on or off, is there anything wrong in adding a zipper? —Mrs. W. F.

Dear Mrs. W. F.,

Ordinarily, the application of a zipper will not change the lines of a pattern at all. If there is not a seam at the center back, you must be sure and add one for the zipper; if there is a seam, just apply the zipper as you normally do.

When a zipper is not suggested for knits, it is usually because the neckline is either scooped, a "V" neck or a boat neck, and there is enough room plus the "give" of the knit to stretch enough to fit over your head without too much difficulty.

By all means, change any pattern to fit your own individual needs. One of the good points about making your own clothes is that they immediately become custom made to your own specifications.

Dear Readers:

We are trying to give you an additional reader service. If I have mentioned a fabric or a sewing accessory in this column that you can't locate in your particular area, let us try to help you. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights 60006, and perhaps we can help you. Be sure to allow several weeks time for your answer, so don't procrastinate. At the same time, you may wish to suggest some new topics you would like to see me cover in "Sew Simple."

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Proper eating better than using laxatives

I am retired, past 80 and lead a sedentary life. I used to walk a lot, but I have painful heel spurs and can't exercise much.

My most depressing trouble is chronic constipation. I had a barium enema in 1970 and absolutely nothing was wrong then. Last September I had complete X-rays and the report said there were a few diverticula in the colon, no sign of tumor, and the stomach showed a small hiatal hernia but no ulcer or tumor.

My constipation is worse now than it was then. My family doctor whom I visit periodically prescribed all kinds of laxatives, such as Doxidan twice a day, and if no help after two to three days to take an enema.

I have not had a normal, natural bowel movement for some time. Enemas are not very comfortable or pleasant. In fact, they are even painful at times and I hate to live with them for the rest of my days.

Your comments will be deeply appreciated.

Your inactivity may contribute to your constipation. I think you should go to an orthopedic doctor and try again to get some help for your heel spurs. Corrective shoes and foot pads may help. In some cases removal of the spur is indicated, but not always.

You can improve your exercise though by getting a home stationary bicycle. You need to develop a mild calisthenic program you can do at home, such as sit-ups.

Both hiatal hernia (hernia of a small part of the stomach) and diverticula (pockets of the colon) are common in the older than 50 age group. The diverticula are often associated with constipation. I feel you should direct your biggest efforts toward correcting your bowel problem.

To that end I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-2, Irritable or Spastic Colon and Constipation. It will tell you how to train your bowel so you won't have so much difficulty. You need to be sure you have enough cereal bulk in your diet and I would suggest a cup of All-Bran or Bran Buds every day for this purpose.

Doxidan is a gentle stool softener and mild stimulant to intestinal contractions. It is frequently used in older people who have these problems. However, I am not enthusiastic about any laxatives and prefer only the bulk-forming ones. You can also get the bulk formation effect from the cereal fiber in the bran I recommended.

You need to do more than just eat bran though. The Health Letter will give you further information about drinking fluids and taking advantage of natural reflex responses. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for The Health Letter. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N. Y. 10019.

Enemas and laxatives lead to spastic colon. If you empty out the colon too soon, it will be a while before it is full and normal bowel habits are restored. Fortunately the laxative you are taking is mild, but I think it is far better to develop proper eating habits and proper bowel habits so you can avoid laxatives altogether. In general, the chemical laxatives do more harm than good for the public and often result in unhealthy habits that lead to chronic bowel problems and may contribute to diverticulosis.

Watering house plants while you're absent

Dear Dorothy: You obviously do some traveling and also keep house plants. We're going on holiday for two weeks. How do we prepare plants for this kind of absence? —Pamela LaFevre

You have four options. (1) Water plants well, allowing excess water to drain. Then enclose entire plant in a transparent plastic bag and put it in indirect light; (2) Use the wick method. Cut a strip of cloth about two inches wide and two feet long. Put a pail of water on a stand higher than the plant. Put one end of the wick in the pail, bury the other end in the plant. A good spot for this is the counter and sink area, (3) For a number of plants use the bathtub. Put layers of moist newspaper in the bottom of the tub to about a quarter-inch thick. Water plants thoroughly and place on the papers which you thoroughly moisten again. Then stretch a sheet of plastic around the sides and top of tub and tape to the wall so the area is airtight. Leave the light on. I've tried it both ways and what a difference it makes! And best of all (4) is to leave your key with a friend or neighbor, who not only can take proper care of your plants, but can check on things that can go awry while you are away —like electrical and water damage. All of us can relate horror stories about things that go haywire — and all true.

Dear Dorothy: In answer to Mrs. Jeanne Treadway's problem with black marks on white shoes, I suggest that if they're vinyl, she use that old-time cleanser (that won't scratch). It will do the job perfectly. — Carole Roberts

Dear Dorothy: This may sound silly, but it works. "Used" chewing gum will take off the sticky adhesive from plastic dishes, glasses and so on after you've peeled off the paper portion. —Diana Seckel

Beverly Hanna–Craig Martensen

Mr. and Mrs. Craig H. Martensea

A mahogany cross made by the bride's uncle and used earlier at the wedding of a cousin decorated South Church, Mount Prospect, Aug. 7 for the wedding of Beverly Sue Hanna and Craig Harold Martensen. The candlelight, double ring service was held at 7 p.m. and was followed by a garden reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Beverly is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hanna, Arlington Heights, and Craig is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Martensen, Rolling Meadows. The couple first met while attending Forest View High.

The bride now has a degree in education from Northern Illinois University and is substitute teaching in the Arlington Heights area. The groom will graduate from Northern Illinois University in December with a degree in business. The couple honeymooned in Bermuda and is residing in Arlington Heights.

BEVERLY CHOSE a silk organza gown with pleating and beaded lace trim. Her cathedral veil was held by a Juliet cap of lace appliques and beading, and she carried miniature orchids, stephanotis and ivy.

Maid of honor was Randi Whitlow, Lombard, and bridesmaids were the bride's sister, Kathy, Patricia Miller, Mount Prospect, and Bethany Smith, Jackson, Tenn. Kathy also served as one of the soloists. All wore blue jersey gowns and blue garden hats. Randi's flowers were similar to the bride's, but accented with coral rosebuds. The others carried yellow lilies, rosebuds and mums with blue delphinium and cornflowers.

Charles Martensen, brother of the groom, Chicago, was best man, and Gregory Winsell and Richard Stewart, Rolling Meadows, and the bride's brother, David, were ushers.

Kathryn Marie Bretz-Francis E. Schuster

Groups study new approach to child-rearing

for logical consequences in which misbehavior is directly related to a consequence. For Anita Cohen this means handing a child a towel when juice is spilled or withholding juice for a while.

ANITA HAS also found that "it is better to just quietly withdraw sometimes. If my children are wining and begging for attention, I stop hovering and go to my room. This lets them find something to do all by themselves."

However, the mother of 10 sais using logical consequences to encourage her childrento clean up "would lead to a citation from the health department. I get tired of seeing the mess so I do it myself."

For Sue Kurtze, the theory is great, but "it is hard to put into practice. It depends on my mood. Sometimes I don't get personally involved and other times I can't keep my emotions out of it."

According to Kate Warner "Wanting to always go by the book is expecting too much. It takes maturity and experience. No theory has all the answers because parents have to grow along with their children."

TAKE IT EASY, advises Dreikurs. "Striving to make life perfect is futile!

"So much of our concern is based on our feeling that we don't really know what to do. However, it is not necessary for us to deal with every little problem that comes up. Children promote many problems just to keep us concerned.

"If we know what to do and what not to do when our children misbehave, our confidence that we can be effective makes it possible for us to relax and enjoy our children."

Nothing magical about an eclipse

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Tim Owens, 14, of High Point, N.C., for his question:

HOW DOES AN ECLIPSE OCCUR?

An eclipse occurs when one celestial body is partially or completely hidden by another. Astronomers use the word "eclipse" to describe two different things — an eclipse of the sun and an eclipse of the moon. Both ar amazing phenomena, but you need to be in the right place at the right time to observe them, for they occur only when the earth, the sun and the moon are in certain positions.

A solar eclipse occurs when the moon passes between the earth and sun. We know that our sun is much larger than our moon. Acutally, it is about 400 times larger, but it is also about 400 times as far away from us. This accounts for the capacity of the moon to completely block out the sun's light. For a total eclipse of the sun, the earth, moon and sun must be in a straight line, which happens only about twice a year.

During a solar eclipse the shadow cast by the moon sweeps across the surface of the earth. At the center of the shadow is a circle of darkness about 60 miles in diameter. This shadow, called the umbra, is surrounded by a much wider circle, not as dark, called the penumbra. The penumbra extends about 2,500 miles beyond the circumference of the umbra. Only if you are in the path of the umbra do you see a total eclipse, which may last up to 7½ minutes. At the total eclipse the beautiful circle of light around the sun is the corona.

An eclipse of the moon occurs when the moon passes through the earth's shadow. As the earth orbits around the sun, its shadow tags along. Our moon orbits the earth, and about once every 20 days the moon catches up with this shadow. Sometimes the moon passes above or below the shadow, but when it passes through, there is a lunar eclipse. When the moon passes through the umbra, or dark inner circle of the earth's shadow, it is an umbral eclipse. If it misses the umbra, it is called a penumbral eclipse.

Astronomers can tell us exactly when eclipses will occur. As many as seven eclipses, total or partial, may be observed in a year — either four solar and three lunar, or five solar and two lunar. And, of course, should you observe a solar eclipse, be sure to protect your eyes properly from the sun's intense light.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Karen Lam, 11, of Kingston, Ont., Canada, for her question:

WHY DO STARS TWINKLE?

It is not safe to look at our starry sun. But it is perfectly fine to view the stars after the sun has gone down. There are thousands of stars to choose from, and if you pick a fairly bright one you can see it twinkle. Like a glistening diamond, it seems to change color and wink off and on. But please remember that things up in the sky tend to fool us. Actually the stars are blazing balls of fiery gas like our own sun, and they do not really twinkle at all.

We gaze at the stars through hundreds of miles of filmy air. And the air plays tricks with the light that comes from faraway stars. They seem to twinkle as the light from them passes through layers of moving air in our atmosphere. If you could view them from out in space, you would see that they shine with a bright, steady light.

(Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and address to Ask Andy in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.)

Right contract gets points

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

Jim: "The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The proof of good bidding is when you get a top or near-top in a match-point game, when there is no real play to the hand."

Oswald: "The bidding in the box is that of Dave Carter of St. Louis and John Hubbell of Kansas City. There was no problem in the play. The defense took one heart trick and continued hearts. John ruffed in dummy and drew trumps. Then he used dummy's long diamonds to dispose of his last heart and deuce of spades."

Jim: "Looks like a simple hand, yet the successful slam was worth 24.5 out of a possible 25 points and materially helped John and Dave to win the 1954 Life Masters' Pairs."

Oswald: "The key bid was when John decided to bid four clubs rather than try three notrump with no stopper in hearts."

Jim: "Those players who bid three notrump watched helplessly while the defense rattled off five heart tricks. A couple of pairs played in diamonds and were only able to score eleven tricks. The club slam made because the twelfth trick came from a ruff by North. At diamonds North's ruff was made with the long trump hand and did declarer no good."

First Mikva-Young debate Sept. 30 at NU

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, and Republican Samuel H. Young of Glenview have agreed to a series of 16 debates and joint appearances during the current campaign.

The pair, who have faced each other for the suburban congressional seat twice before, will start their series of appearances at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 30, at Leverone Hall at Northwestern University.

They also will have three appearances in Des Plaines during the campaign. They will debate Oct. 13 at the Elks Club, Oct. 17 at Trinity Lutheran Church and Oct. 20 at Maine North High School.

I.F. Stone to address group

Oakton Community college has announced its "Election '76" program schedule.

The series will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Maine South High School, Park Ridge, with an address by I. F. Stone, a nationally known journalist and political observer.

Other programs scheduled during the series include a debate between U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva and Republican challenger Samuel H. Young Oct. 19. Nine panel discussions have been scheduled.

Candidates tell appointments

Candidates in the area are gearing up their campaigns for the Nov. 2 election. Palatine Village Trustee Richard Fonte was named Palatine Township coordinator for James R. Thompson's gubernatorial campaign.

Republican Samuel H. Young has named Richard A. Kent of Golf as special groups chairman and Richard A. Jacobson of Mount Prospect as public relations coordinator.

Roger A. Keats, Republican candidate for the Illinois House from the 1st Legislative District, was named to the advisory board of the Illinois Small Businessmen's Assn.

U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, announced he has opened his campaign office at 905 E. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights. A grand opening celebration will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday.

Regner challenged to debate

Democrat Michael T. Smith, a candidate for the Illinois Senate from the 3rd Legislative District, has challenged State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, to a debate.

Smith's challenge to Regner came in a telegram sent to the incumbent by the Elk Grove Village resident.

Smith also issued a statement backing an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency decision to change the standards for cooling lakes for steam electric-generating plants.

Smith charged that after five years of study there has been no meaningful action taken to curb thermal pollution problems in Illinois.

MSD spending control urged

William F. Griffith, Republican candidate for Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioner, has called for tighter controls on the district's finances following the revelation that $10,000 was spent on a stamp contest without board approval.

Griffith said he supports a proposal by MSD Comr. Joan Anderson, the only Republican on the board, to have all voucher lists for payment of personal services submitted to the board with the reason for the expenditure listed.

The $10,000 was spent without board approval on the authority of Valentine Janicki, board vice president, to solicit entries for a stamp contest commemorating the 75th anniversary of the reversing of the flow of the Chicago River.

Griffith said, "Maybe since the MSD Board has been contaminated for so long by the Daley Democrats some of the people on the board have become immune to the difference between proper and improper procedures."

Rothman to oppose Graham

Democrat Marshall Rothman of Barrington, nominated to run for the Illinois Senate in the 2nd Legislative District in the March primary, formally announced his candidacy for office last week.

Rothman, 48, will oppose state Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, in the November 2 election. He said he plans to release full financial statements and medical reports to the voters.

Rothman has been active in the Barrington Area Democratic Club and other area civic organizations.

Students urged to seek grants now

College students seeking financial aid from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission should submit an application within the next few days or face possible refusal, Larry Matejka, director of financial aid at the University of Illinois, said.

Matejka said 15,000 more applicants filed by June 30 this year than last. Although the usual filing deadline is Oct. 1, it probably will come earlier this year because of the increase in applicants, he said.

In the school year which ended in June, 92,000 students received $68.42 million in aid. The commission has $69.67 million for the 1976-77 year and an estimated 93,000 college students in Illinois will receive financial aid.

THE AWARDS are based on financial need, but late applicants may be refused because the money has run out, an ISSC official said.

"We're mostly concerned with areas in the lower-income brackets, because students from those areas usually don't know until the last minute whether they'll be able to raise enough money," Matejka said. "But they should apply even if they think there is only a slight chance they'll go to school."

Applications for aid are available at the student financial aid offices of all colleges and universities in Illinois. It takes about 60 days to process each application.

Arlington Heights wins region title

Special to The Herald

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Arlington Heights piled up five runs in the second inning and then coasted to a 13-2 triumph over Columbus, O. Sunday night, capturing the title at the American Legion Great Lakes regional tourney and winning a trip to the national finals in New Hampshire next week.

Kevin MacBride went the distance on the hill for Arlington to notch his second victory of the series. His teammates staked him to three more runs in the fifth inning and Columbus was never really in the game afterwards, stung primarily by their own shakey fielding and an exhausted pitching staff.

Columbus had pushed Arlington Heights to the limit in the afternoon game, beating coach Lloyd Meyer's team, 4-3, with four unearned runs. The Columbus outfit, defeated by Arlington, 3-1, earlier in the regional tournament, was playing its sixth game in three days.

After falling into the losers' bracket, Columbus knocked off Frankfurt (Ky.) 8-5, Lafayette (Ind.) 9-5, and Janesville (Wis.) 9-5.

Errors plagued Arlington Heights in the Sunday afternoon contest, which saw righthander Dennis Drolet take a narrow 1-0 lead in to the bottom of the sixth. But two mis cues and a bad-hop single paved the way for three unearned Columbus runs in that frame.

The sixth inning started with Columbus catcher Scott Stewart bouncing a ground single through the middle of the diamond. The ball took a hop on center fielder Jerry DeSimone and when it rolled away from him for an error Stewart took second base.

Jim Andreoff followed with a two-hopper that caromed over Brett Frase's head at third for a hit as Stewart pulled up at third base. A moment later Stewart scored the tying run and Andreoff moved to second when shortstop Paul Marsillo tossed out Chip Loftus on a high bouncer over the mound.

Frase then fielded John Cassen's grounder, but his throw was juggled by first baseman Tom Barnard and Andreoff came all the way around to score the go-ahead run. Cassen stole second and Mike McCallister drove him home with a ground single to center.

"They had two or three hits that were just routine ground balls right up the middle," said Meyer. "Drolet actually pitched an excellent ball game. You can't expect him to pitch any better. He got them to hit grounders."

The loss, however, went to reliever Todd Walker, who pitched just one inning, the eighth. After retiring the first two Columbus batters, Walker walked McCallister on four pitches and gave up a single to number-eight hitter Steve Perano.

Walker then picked McCallister off second, but Danny Frase's throw to brother Brett at third hit the runner in the head and bounced away, allowing McCallister to score the eventual winning run.

"We made a super play," Meyer moaned. "What really gets me is that we worked a play to beat them and we ended up beating ourselves."

Arlington Heights managed just two infield hits through the first seven innings off Columbus righty Bob Immel, who had suffered the loss to Arlington three days earlier. But an unearned run in the second inning looked for a while like it would hold up and make Immel a loser again.

John Vukovich led off with a single off the glove of the shortstop, Andreoff. After Vukovich stole second, Brett Frase put down a sacrifice bunt and when the ball was thrown away at first Vukovich came in to score. Frase went all the way to third, but Columbus claimed he missed second base and the umpires upheld the protest, taking Arlington Heights out of a potentially big inning.

Arlington, trailing 3-1, finally reached Immel in the eighth. The big Columbus hurler had fanned eight through the first seven innings, but Don Stebbins opened the frame with a ground-rule double to right center, then went to third on a wild pitch.

Pinch hitter Danny Frase walked and Marsillo grounded out, scoring Stebbins and sending Frase to second. Mike Mayerck then pinch hit and stroked a soft Texas Leaguer in short right field that second baseman Loftus bobbled and dropped. Mayerck got credit for a hit as Frase tallied the tying run.

Predictions for 2076...

Jim Murray

Barbara Rosenstein, of the Los Angeles City Bicentennial Committee, was on the phone.

"We are putting together a time capsule to be dedicated and sealed at the Griffith Park Observatory and opened 100 years from now," she told me. "Would you care to put some predictions as to what the year 2076 will be like in sports?"

Since all my life I've been known as a man with a firm grasp of things that never happened, I was only too glad to oblige my city and my country. Since 2076 will also be an Olympic Year, I decided to put my predictions in the form of news stories which will bombard the home screens of America during the Tricentennial. Like,

"MCMURDO SOUND, ANARTICA — While the warships of 30 nations patrolled the ice shelf to keep out terrorists, the 46th Olympiad opened today at this sheltered location to which spectators were barred after the planet Krypton angrily boycotted the games because the planet Telegony was permitted to enter the games under the name of Greater Uranus.

Euorpe boycotted the games in protest over the admission of the American team, pointing out America had voted Republican at the last election in clear contravention of Europe's wishes.

The Inter-Galactic Olympic Committee hailed the games for promoting universal and inter-spatial goodwill. The Russians protested that the South Poles were encouraging their athletes to defect to the moon."

MCMURDO SOUND, ANARTICA — Oliver Orbit, of the U.S., soared to a new pole vault record of 559 feet 11 inches tonight to win the gold medal in the event. Unfortunatelly, it was awarded posthumously as his parachute failed to open on his descent. The malfunction was ironical as the East Germans had protested Orbit's chute was beyond Olympics standards. They claimed the gold on the grounds Orbit was unable to pass the mandatory post-event urine test for doping."

"MCMURDO SOUND, ANARTICA — The unisex shotput went to a former Leipziz hausfrau, Lotta Bulke, today with a first throw of 287 feet. The 900-pound East German is the first to throw the 16-pound shot overhand. The unisex event is for athletes who failed to pass the sex test either way."

"BOSTON GARDEN — Thanks to the spirited play of two diminutive 11-foot guards, the Boston Celtics today won the NBA playoffs, 1000-998, over the Milwaukee Bucks. The low-scoring was occasioned by the fact that Boston's 25-foot center, "Sky" Scraper, missed an easy laydown in the fourth quarter which reduced the team's floor percentage to 99.9 per cent.

This was the lowest scoring game since the NBA began drafting players at birth and sending them to the camp in the Caucasus where hormone injection and pituitary stimulation produces future stars of the NBA where the minimum salary is $60,000 a night.

The board of governors once again voted down a proposal to raise the baskets as "interfering with the essential purity of the game." "They're trying to bring back the jump shot but the fans have grown accustomed to the stoop shot which is much more difficult to execute," the commissioner warned.

"OAKLAND — The owner of the Oakland B's of the National-American League today sold $55 million worth of ballplayers to a variety of clubs around the major leagues.

This brings to $10 billion the dollar amount of players Charoles O. Money has sold in the past decade. Money's club remains mired in the cellar, they haven't won a game in 18 years and the total paid attendance last year was nine, but Money has replaced the Emir of Kuwait as the world's richest man through his player sales.

Thanks to his team's poor finishes, Money gets the draft rights to premier players every year and, by the laws of Baseball, they have to sign with him or no one. Money sometimes goes as high as $10,000 for a new recruit. He then turns them over to his hitting and pitching coaches who make $8,000 a year apiece and, after they learn from them and pitch their first no-hitter or hit their first 25 home runs, Money deals them off.

"Pretty good for a guy who doesn't know a slider from a change-up or a hit-and-run from a sacrifice fly," Charles O. bragged from the poop-deck of his all-gold, 40,000-ton yacht. Money also boasted that he depreciated the players tax-wise before selling them to the point where the government owed him money at the end of every year.

Money estimates that, while he has never won a pennant, he has sold 20 of them in the past 25 years.

"Buying and selling human beings is in the best traditions of America," Money proudly insisted. "It's what made this country great."

Responding to criticism of his habit of selling stars for upwards of $10 million, Money snapped, "Why shouldn't I be able to sell them? Baseball gave me the lifetime rights to them, didn't it?"

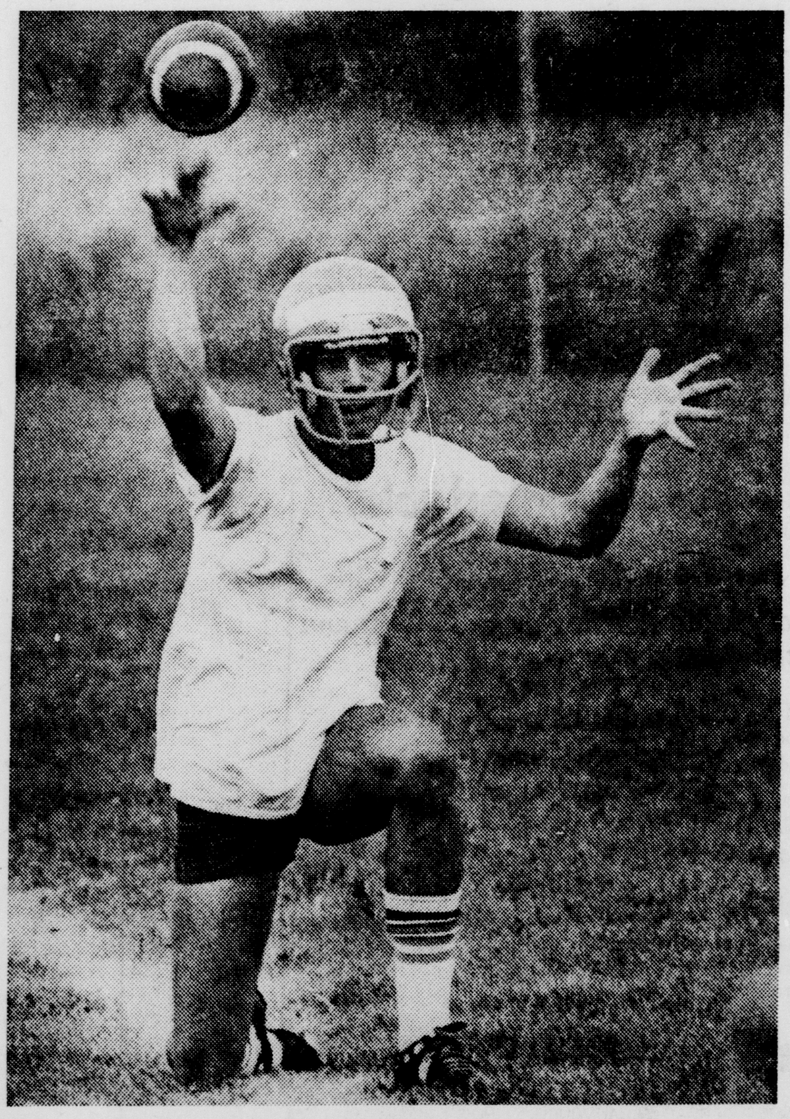
"STATE COLLEGE STATION — The NCAA modified its eligibility rules to remove the restriction that any student athlete must be required to prove it can eat with a knife-and-fork.

"Fingers were made before forks, and so were claws" ruled the eligibility committee. The ruling struck down the literacy test which required the applicant to be able to read and write — or speak — a recognizable language.

Henceforth, an applicant must be accepted if he can paw the ground twice for "yes" and once for "No" or peel his own bananas. The board restored that of the tackle who ate the team mascot or who tried to drag the dean of women up a tree. Or the Empire State Building. Trying to put a lettermen's jacket on his feet or wearing his school letter upside-down and mis-pronouncing the eye chart are no longer grounds for ruling a player ineligible — unless his footprints are found on the ceiling."

If any or all of these things are true, nothing's changed. But if someone says "What's a Buckeye?" in 2076, there's hope.

LEFT FORWARD Santiago Bustamante searches for an open Prospect teammate during soccer practice last week. The Knights, under head coach Wally Bachir, will play high school soccer for the first time this fall. Bachir has about 100 players in the program.



DAN VUCOVICH has big shoes to fill at Hersey, but he and head coach Joe Gliwa are confident that when opening bell rings for 1976 grid season Sept. 10, fans will be pleased with what they see at quarterback. Vucovich will take over from graduated Scott Topczewski, who led Huskies to consecutive North titles.

Brett, Hamilton team up to blank Milwaukee, 2-0

Brian Downing and Chet Lemon hit run-scoring singles in the eighth inning Sunday to give the Chicago White Sox a 2-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers behind the combined six-hit pitching of Ken Brett and Dave Hamilton.

Brett was locked in a scoreless duel with loser Eduardo Rodriguez, 5-10, through seven innings, but in the Chicago eighth Jorge Orta led off with a walk and stole second. Jim Spencer grounded to first baseman George Scott, but Rodriguez missed the bag covering first and both runners were safe.

Downing greeted reliever Bill Castro with a single to score Orta and Lemon followed with a single that scored pinch-runner Alan Bannister.

Brett, 8-8, had to leave the game in the bottom of the eighth after a line drive by Charlie Moore struck his pitching hand. Hamilton proceeded to load the bases with none out but Gorman Thomas flied out to center and Lemon's throw in held the runners at their bases.

After that Brett whiffed Robin Yount and Jack Heidemann to end the threat. Milwaukee also left a pair of baserunners stranded in the ninth.

The shutout was the ninth this season for the Sox and Hamilton in his last five games now has pitched 10 scoreless innings, allowing only five hits, and has recorded two wins and two saves.

Chicago also wasted some run potential, allowing 13 men to be left on base. The triumph gave them the series over the Brewers 2-1 and evened up their record on the road for this trip at 3-3.

Mitterwald homer decks Atlanta

George Mitterwald, who hasn't exactly had things going his way lately, stroked a two-run homer in the fifth inning Sunday to hike the Chicago Cubs past the Atlanta Braves 3-2 for a sweep of their three-game series.

The triumph was also Chicago's 15th triumph in 27 games during the month of August, assuring them of solid winning record for the 31-day period.

Mitterwald, subbing for the sore-shouldered Steve Swisher, had a poor series against Houston including a costly miscue during one loss. He has not been overly productive at the plate during the past week either.

But the veteran catcher did the right thing against Phil Niekro, connecting off the knuckleballing hurler to overcome a 2-1 Cub deficit and sending Chicago pitcher Ray Burris along to his 12th victory in 24 decisions.

Burris, who was tapped for nine hits including a couple of bloopers lost in the sun, did not walk a man in going the route. He now stands a solid chance of bettering his 15-victory season of a year ago.

Mitterwald's blast came after Manny Trillo had doubled off Niekro. The Cubs also got an unearned run in the first after Rick Monday reached on a first baseman Willie Montanez bobble of a grounder.

Monday stole second and reached third on Niekro's wild pitch. And he scored when catcher Vic Correll let an outfield peg go through him to the screen for an error.

Atlanta tied it 1-1 in the third on singles by Correll, Roland Office and Rod Gilbreath and a fielder's choice. The Braves took a 2-1 lead in the fourth when Jerry Royster's single drove in Darrell Chaney, who had tripled.

Graham dominates Firestone Classic

Australian David Graham shot a steady three-under-par 69 Sunday on the Windswept Firestone Country Club North Course to win the $200,000 American Golf Classic with a 72-hole score of 274, 14 under par.

The victory earned him $40,000 and because it was his second win this year he qualifies for next week's $300,000 World Series of Golf at Firestone's South Course.

Graham, who along with 25 others had to finish their suspended third round Sunday morning, began the final round tied with Ray Floyd at 11 under par.

But he took the lead on the second hole when Floyd double bogeyed, and he led the rest of the way, holding a six stroke margin with only five holes to play.

Finishing second after a furious closing rush was former U.S. Open champ Lou Graham, who birdied three of the final six holes for a 68 and a 72-hole score of 278, 10 under par. Lou Graham had a 65 Saturday, the day's best.

Tom Jenkins, who had a final round 70, finished third at 279, while Jim Simons, Ed Sneed and Bob Gilder tied for fourth with eight under 280 scores. Simons had a closing round 74, Sneed a 73 and Gilder a 70.

Floyd, who had rounds of 69-68-68 the first three days, skied to a 76 Sunday to tie Wally Armstrong and Rik Massengale for the seventh spot.

Seahawks, Raiders notch victories

Quarterbacks Jim Zorn and Ken Stabler helped engineer victories for Seattle and Oakland respectively in exhibition National Football League action Sunday afternoon.

Zorn tossed a three-yadr touchdown pass to tight end Ron Howard with 13 seconds left as Seattle edged San Diego 17-16 for the new Seahawks' first win. Stabler meanwhile passed for two touchdowns in the second quarter and the Oakland Raiders hung on for a 14-9 victory over the San Francisco 49ers.

Zorn completed 17 of 30 passes for 228 yards and gave up two interceptions and the scrambling lefthander became the first Seattle quarterback to play an entire game. San Diego had taken a 16-10 lead with six minutes left in the fourth quarter on a nine-yard twisting touchdown run by Bo Matthews. But John Delaney's attempt at the point after was wide, leaving room for Seattle's first winning effort in six tries.

The Raiders marched 98 yards in 24 plays for their first touchdown. After 49er kicker Tom Wittum punted out of bounds on the Oakland two, Stabler led a scoring march that lasted almost 11 minutes. During the drive he completed eight passes, with the final one going five yards to tight end Dave Casper for the TD.

The Raiders got the ball again late in the second quarter on the San Francisco 27 following a 39-yard punt return by Neal Colzie. Stabler missed on his first pass but then completed three in a row, with the last one going to Carl Garrett for five yards and a touchdown.

U.S. and King retake Federation cup

The United States regained the Federation Cup Sunday for the first time since 1969 when Billie Jean King, the dominant female athlete of the past decade, and Rosie Casals, her playing partner during that time, teamed to beat Australia in the premier women's team tennis competition.

It was the United States' fifth victory in eight final appearances in the 14-year history of the competition. It was Australia's fourth loss in 11 final appearances and the two teams are now even at 3-3 in victories against each other.

America's dynamic duo last played Federation Cup in 1967, when the U.S. also beat Australia, but this time they had to play through five rounds without any support after Chris Evert went out with a tendon injury in her right hand.

The victory, worth $40,000, was all the more remarkable because the 33-year-old King has not played tournament singles since she won the sixth of her Wimbledon titles in 1975. She was also nursing two painful knees after appearing in Friday's World Team Tennis finals in New York which meant she was obliged to play four matches Sunday so that the U.S. could catch up with the schedule.

King defeated Evonne Boolagong, 7-6, 6-4, to stretch her lifetime record against the 25-year-old Australian to 8-3 after Kerry Reid had put Australia ahead with a 1-6, 6-3, 7-5 win over Casals. In the decisive doubles King and Casals defeated Cawley and Reid 7-5, 6-3.

Crenshaw a winner in Ireland

Texan Ben Crenshaw, surviving a double bogey at the par-three 15th, carded a one-over-par 73 Sunday but still won the $60,000 Carrolls Irish Open Golf Championship.

Crenshaw, leading money winner on the PGA circuit this year, added $12,600 to his total for his four-under 284 which gave him a two-stroke win over Billy Casper and Britons Mark Foster and Brian Barnes, who tied for second.

Crenshaw kept his overnight lead of two strokes up to the 187-yard 15th where he missed the green, tried to run his ball up the bank unsuccessfully and had to settle for a five which tied with his three rivals.

At the next hole, Crenshaw was in worse trouble when he put his second shot into a sand trap. But he blasted out to within three feet for a birdie to regain the lead.

Nastase rips Tanner for $10,000

Fiery Romanian Ilie Nastase, serving brilliantly and crashing running forehand winners off difficult angled volleys, recorded a masterful 6-4, 6-2 victory over Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., Sunday in the men's singles finals of the $60,000 Tennis Week Open at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

Nastase, seeded No. 1, won a $10,000 top prize and also retired the tournament bowl worth $4,000. Tanner, the second-seed, had to settle for $5,000 and the knowledge that he had a good tourney in preparation for this week's U.S. Open.

Lea Antonoplis, the 17-year-old from Glendora, Calif., who caused quite a sensation in Saturday's semifinals in beating transsexual Dr. Renee Richards, couldn't equal that effort in the women's championship round against Marise Kruger of South Africa.

Kruger, winning the biggest prize of her career when she acceped a check for $1,800, needed only 55 minutes for a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Antonoplis.

And in other sports news...

Briton James Hunt, driving a McLaren, won the Dutch Formula 1 Grand Prix on his 29th birthday, turning the once lopsided world driving championship into a down-to-the-wire finish with still convalescing Austrian Niki Lauda. Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland was second in the Zandvoort-hosted race and Mario Andretti placed third.

Kenya's Mike Boit outraced Filbert Bayi to win the men's 800 meters while Americans held their own in other events at the International Track and Field meet in Rieti, Italy Sunday. Dwight Stones cleared 7-4 to win the high jump whle John Powell and Mac Wilkins placed 1-2 in the discus. Willie Davenport annexed the 110 meter hurdles blue ribbon, Paul Durkin won the 1,500 meters and Garry Bjorklund topped the 5,000 meters field.

In Boston, Bjorn Borg roared into the finals of the U.S. Pro tourney by crushing Eddie Dibbs 7-6, 6-2 while Rod Laver awaited the winner of a Harold Solomon-Raul Ramirez bout for his semifinal showdown . . . Cale Yarborough outclassed the field at Bristol, Tenn., with a runaway victory in the Volunteer 400, averaging just under 100 miles per hour in his Chevrolet .

Wildcats look to first division

Northwestern, hoping to be strong up the middle, has bright prospects for the Big Ten football campaign, but unfortunately the prospects are bright for a first division finish and not a championship.

Michigan and Ohio State rank as the top title contenders, an annual prospect, but should Johnny Pont's team avoid injuries and get a few breaks, Northwestern could battle for one of the top five positions in the standings.

First-team talent should be good, at almost all positions, but the age-old problem of depth at almost all positions remains.

There could be a solid one-two passing-running punch with Randy Dean, runnerup in Big Ten passing last year, and Greg Boykin, Northwestern's all-time leading rusher, returning. Boykin had six games in which he gained more than 100 yards.

Scott Yelvington will be back at split end, trying for his third straight Big Ten pass reception championship, and Pont believes that another wide receiver, Mark Bailey, and tight end Dan Cleary will make for a strong passing game.

Up the middle on defense will be middle guard Paul Maly, who led the team in sacks and was second in tackles last year, and free safety Pete Shaw, the leading tackler and interceptor on the team last year.

Six starters return on offense. Tackle Tony Ardizzone and guard Carl Peterson rank as stalwarts. But the other tackle post is a toss-up between sophomore Joe Corona and Don Herzog, and four lettermen are in contention for the other guard spot. Jim Foskett looks like a cinch at center.

There's no experience at fullback and Jim Whims, Matt Reitzug and Lou Due, could wind up in the blocking position.

Defensively three of the five line spots will be occupied by returning starters — end Kevin Sprouse, Maly and talkle Marty Szostak — while Mike Weitzman, Steve Shust, Garry Ogden, and Mike Kendzicky contend for the other two spots.

Linebacking also is a question mark with Al Benz, Greg Stanley, Lodi Vercelli and Blaine Ogilvie in the running for starting berths.

In the defensive backfield, Shaw is the only survivor who started 11 games last year, and a trio, Jack Gavin, Rob Dean and Steve Scardina, are candidates for the strong safety position. At the corners, Mark Harlow and Jim Hutchings are leading prospects with Guy Knafelc a possible alternate.

Pont foresees a "fine blend of youth and experience to provide the impetus" for a better season. But it might be better only if there is a minimum of injuries and the ball bounces right more often than wrong.

Schaumburg Park District

Rendino's Pizza won the National League championship in the Schaumburg Park District Men's 16-inch league. Rendino's won the championship the hard way. After finishing in a tie with the Chiefs at 15-4 for the year, they beat the Chiefs in a special playoff and then went undefeated in the semi-finals and finals. In the final series they rolled over Village Towing 29-11 and 20-6. Rendino's finished the season with a 20-4 record.

The Heritage Bank Banchees crushed Uncle Vern's Avengers 21-8 for third place.

Over in the Powerful American League, the Cumberland Service Maulers easily handled the Shooters 8-3 and 19-8 to win their second championship within 24 hours. Earlier they beat the Shooters for the Mount Prospect title in two straight games.

The Foxes outlasted Vaccaro's Restaurant 11-5 for third place.

BRUCE AND Chrystie Jenner could be smiling about their future after Bruce's gold medal performance in the decathlon event.

Jenner's agents count blessings and millions

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN JOSE, Calif. — "If we had programmed it with God," says George Wallach, "the Olympics couldn't have worked out better for Bruce Jenner."

Wallach is the personal manager of the new cult hero of mid-America, the handsome, dazzling winner of the decathlon at XXI Olympiad in Montreal. Wallach, an effervescent agent with a pad in one of those crags in the Hollywood hills, details the manifest destiny that led to the crowning of Jenner as the "world's greatest athlete" and the most exploitable property to come out of the Olympics:

"Let Frank Shorter lose the marathon. (He did.)

"Let Dwight Stones lose the high jump. (He did.)

"Let the 1500 meters become a nothing race. (With the defection of Kenya's Mike Boit, it did.)

"Let Bruce win the decathlon with a flouish." And he did, with that climatic 4:12.6 mile to zoom the world decathlon record to a phenomenal 8,618 points.

In New York immediately thereafter, claims Wallach, Jenner "was treated like Lindbergh" and "Bruce and Chrystie (his pretty blonde wife) became the new sweethearts of America."

In New York it was also revealed that besides Wallach and his 10 per cent agent's bite, the William Morris Agency will handle Jenner's theatrical future and Rogers and Cowan, of New York and Hollywood, will handle his publicity."

"Potentially," gushes George, "he's as big as Robert Redford. If Hollywood is calling, you've got to have guys (William Morris, Rogers and Cowan) who can respond to that call. Even if it does cost 10 points."

This is offer-study time as Bruce and Chrystie flew off to Hawaii for some restful frolicking. In the first two days after the Olympics, Wallach fielded $300,000 worth of offers. He says William Morris estimates that in the "commercials" area, Jenner can make $2 million.

"Already," says Wallach, "we've got two Hollywood proposals for films — heroic kinds of things. A men's product offered $100,000 for a commercial. Mike O'Hara offered $200,000 for Bruce to compete for the ITA (International Track Association). That's out. We don't want him to be doing 20-yard sprints against O. J. Simpson.

"We want to limit commercial exposure to two or three blue chip companies on a long-term basis. In television, we want to give him sportscasting experience. Maybe do a couple of specials. No series.

"He might do state fairs for personal appearances. People want to meet him."

If you've got the idea by now all this has been fairly carefully orchestrated before hand, you're on the right track. Phil Finch, a young novelist, had already started on an autobiography with Bruce several months ago. A contract for Prentice-Hall to publish it next spring was signed two days after the Olympics, and a 6,000-word excerpt will appear in Sports Illustrated in a month.

Alan Rothenberg, a prominent Los Angeles lawyer retained by Wallach, carefully checks all the fine print. Alan, once in line to be commissioner of pro basketball, is a pragmatic type. "We've taken no deals yet," he says, "because we don't have the same problem as Mark Spitz (the '72 Olympics hero who flopped as a commercial personality). There's no need to take the money and run."

To cynics who wonder about the "All-America boy and Mom's apple pie" merchandising of Jenner, Rothenberg shrugs, "That's the way he is. Besides, that's what's selling these days. He'll get the milk commercials — and Joe Namath can take the booze commercials."

The man with the baton is Wallach, who saw pictures of Bruce and Chrystie in People Magazine last winter, called them up and told them that they had a look which would sell.

They met for the first time when Bruce came to Los Angeles in January to compete in the Sunkist Games. George took him to his Benedict Canyon home, the one with the kidney-shaped swimming pool and a 450SL Mercedes in the driveway. "I was the first person to show interest in him," says George.

Naturally, because Bruce as an amateur, there could be no formal contract and Wallach says that four months elapsed before he felt the Jenners were committed to him. But at the final Olympic trials in Eugene, Ore., and at the Games in Montreal, discreetly on the scene were Wallach, Rothenberg and Finch.

WIN A TRIP FOR TWO TO THE ROSE BOWL IN THE HERALD'S PICK THE WINNERS CONTEST

ENTRY BLANK AND DETAILS IN THE HERALD MON., SEPT. 6

11 area golfers competing in Illinois Open at Exmoor

Eleven area golfers — six pros and five amateurs — will be among the 141 players competing today in the 27th annual Illinois Open golf championship at Highland Park's Exmoor Country Club.

Rolling Green Country Club will be represented by Billy Ventresca, Steve Jenne and Bob Nied. Mount Prospect Country Club will have Emil Esposito and Remo Crovetti. Al Wietecha will represent Rob Roy.

Nicky Zambole and Steve Cisco, both of Palatine, will be among the 35 amateurs on this 6,900-yard, par 72 layout. Other area amateurs are Chris Marszalek of Arlington Heights, David Nelson of Mount Prospect and Tom Benjamin of Buffalo Grove.

Defending champion is Bill Erfurth of Skokie Country Club.

The low 80 plus ties will advance to the final day's play. If Tuesday's slate of 36 holes ends in a tie, there will be a sudden-victory playoff.

The 106 pros will be competing for $11,000. Merchandise gift certificates will be given to the low amateurs.

SPOTTED HORSES will begin appearing at Arling- ton Park beginning Tuesday.

Appaloosa's ready to run

Appaloosa racing returns to Arlington Park for the third consecutive summer Tuesday.

The spotted "Indian Ponies" will add a bit of Western flair to the regular nine race thoroughbred card every day through Labor Day Monday, Sept. 6th. First post on Appaloosa race days at Arlington Park is 1:30 p.m.

Bob Blair, field director for the Appaloosa organization, reports that between 60 and 100 horses will be available for racing. After Labor Day, Blair estimates that three Appaloosa races will be held each week through the end of the Arlington meeting (Saturday, Oct. 2nd).

Hightlight of the Appaloosa program again this year will be the Ben Blades Memorial Stakes with an estimated purse of $25,000. The race, which honors the late Illinois state legislator who authored the Illinois Appaloosa racing bill, will be run on Labor Day Monday.

Time Flies, winner of over $62,000 in his career, is back to try to win the Ben Blades for the third consecutive year. Other crack Appaloosa racers ready to run are Commanche Warbonnet, Whats Up Ghost, and Kaskaskia Chico.

To assure the Appaloosa sport will be first class, the training champion and the leading money winning horse of 1975 are both on hand.

R.C. "Bucky" Wheeler, who led all Appaloosa conditioners last season with 32 wins, and his prize charge We Go Easy, who earned a list topping $42,235 in 1975, are recent arrivals from Oregon.

We Go Easy, a three-year-old chestnut filly, has won the California Derby and the Santa Roma Derby this year. Last year at age two, she won six of eight starts and added two second place efforts to rack up her championship bankroll.

We Go Easy accounted for the Texas Appaloosa Futurity, the Santa Fe Appaloosa Futurity, and several other big 1975 races.

In the World Wide Appaloosa Futurity of 1975 held at Albuquerque, New Mexico, We Go Easy was nipped a nose by Dervish Maid. The total purse for the race was $81,327, of which $32,530 went to first and $16,265 went to second.

Appaloosa horses, distinguished from other breeds by their spotted coats and eyes encircled with white like a human's, were imported to the Americas from the Near East or Spain with shipments of goods to Mexico about 1600.

The spread of the horses northward was made by the Plains Indians and by about 1730, the Nez Perce had them. They bred them for rigorous mountain travel and racing, instilling in them the quiet, sensible disposition that is a trait common to Appaloosas today.

The breed nearly disappeared after the Nez Perce War of 1877, but in 1938 the Appaloosa Horse Club was founded and a new breeding program using a few of the descendants of the Nez Perce horses as foundation stock was instituted.

Today there are more than 60,000 owners of Appaloosas who have registered more than 150,000 horses. Appaloosas comprise the third largest breed registry in the world and is still growing.

Appaloosas got their name from the area in which they were bred, Palouse Country. Palouse horses became slurred to form Apalouse and later Apalousie and finally, Appaloosa.
